Get a six-year-old to read and explain to you part 97.3 (Definitions), subpart (4) where it DEFINES the Amateur service, note the word service, nowhere does it say hobby.

Since it can't, I don't. You can memorize enough that it mimics

I would tell you where to insert your request but I am feeling kind but indeed to draw the schamtic you just called would require either looking up what made it a Wien bridge or to have it memeorized nothing about the the name of clasification of the occilator are derived from first principles that being Maxells equations

you when asked with the cance to check your notes can not described what YOU had to draw

I stated I could memorize a dozen or so schematics,(indeed that I can memerize whole plays well enough to get paid for the skill should be proof of that) and indeed to know the collpitts or wien or the fu manchu occilator I would have to memerize what made it one verus the but your statement is an amdission to my point. I said meroization can replace understanding. you state it can minic it. I agree fully with that statement therefore since memorization can minic undersatnding as long as one can memirze enough at a given period of time then this proves that Understanding was never required in the same period of testing.

Understanding is always a good thing if it happens, but short of a great deal of knowledge that is not reuired Memorizing the Caps in paralell add, while Indcutor and resister in paralel go though a more complex formula (that I am not sure how to accurately put in this text but ends up halfing if the value in paralele are the same) is fine and no harm is done by this

There was only one ship in orbit in "Independence Day", the mother ship.
All of the other ships that detached from the mother ship, the daughter ships, so to speak, were all within the Earth's atmosphere. That is why the satellites were necessary to overcome the line-of-sight problem between the mother ship and the daughter ships on the opposite side of the planet.

earth is the only earthlike planet with a heavyside layer effect and in centuries these folks never developded the tech to mach WWV (the time station?)

it was nice movie even I as deadicated a Nododer as they come enjoyed

If you want to do a beacon, why not do one in a ham band somewhere? It would be much more valuable to the ham community than your goof-ball 13.556.

Just for fun, I did a four watt beacon on ten meters once back in the 80's. I let it run for two days, and got about six QSL card reception reports. LOL. None were DX though.

I'll try to copy a few of those beacons. Maybe there is info on about the stations, and possible they have a waiver for an increase in power or antenna size.

Mark, would you put these five steps on your web blog for me? Thanks. I also want to try to get the moon bouncers to help us out. I think by puting the five steps on your website, a lot more hams will see and agree the five steps are a good idea. TNX, 73

SC

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Step 5: Cancel your league membership until they decide to work to improve things.

It's not a beacon, we play music and information, it's a low power shortwave broadcast
I am however looking to put a beacon up on ten meters.

no harm is done ever

IndeedI see NO reason why you ever need to have that particular piece of knowledge at your fingertips

if you need (I guess to do a subtitution or work around a strange resitance or cap or inductance but like another peice of knowledge on the extra pool why would anyone need to know what frequence with a signal was balck in FS ATV

there are porblems with the qustion pools mostly the out dated knowledge that is still tested for

I am honest. I don't think CW has ANY value in todays world.

you are welcome to play with it but not to us it to restrict access to some that is part of my birthright and yours

the Congress has no power to regulate Radio except from the ITU treaty Interstate commerce. If you don't understand how that gives the government the right to regulate radio, you don't understand enough about the Constitution to discuss the subject.

comerence this IS AMATEUR RADIO you dolt commerce is forbidden

how does Morse code relate to Comerce anyway?

Interstate commerce gives the Congress the right to require Morse Code testing> Id love to TJ weigh in on that

of course in fact you are beyond any convincing you have decided that Morse is somehow vital to Ham radio

forutnately my auduince is out there a gruop you and your postion failed to conivnce the ARRL may be getting the FCC to drag it feet awhile but do you realy think code testing will last amore than a few years at the outside

Indeed in last round before 2000 I could not find one of the procoders who would state he beleived that code testing was not doomed

That's the revised version updated in 2006, the old version was 10,000 uV/m @ 30 meters.

Reminds me of the Japanese WWII soldiers still being pulled out of the bush in th ePI in the 1970's. Robescum is out of touch with communications theory and practice.

Robescum requires his own "AIG" and comm center.

I'd be wrong if I said that everything that Robescum posts is fraudulent. So I won't.

Let the reader beware that they need to inspect every Robescum posting for fraud.

I think he just liked listening in on phone patches from real servicemen to their wives. He probably got in a few minutes of "comfort time " with the wives after the patch went "dead."

Wondr how that sounds in Morse Code?

There is a group that goes after fakers. I think they're called "Stolen Valor." They're probably aware of Robescum.

He said that we were welcome to his VA records. Maybe he'll shoot us his SSN via the "backchannel," though I doubt he remembers it himself.

Hmmm? A 1LT with Captain's bars? Typical Robescum.

Wasn't he claiming to be enlisted in the USMC?

I'll bet he got a boner putting on that used flight suit. Oh, was that his stomach sticking out?

By his absence, I thought that Robescum might have been incarcerated or doiing some heavy duty counseling.

Summer is about over. Been working too much.

I took the kids to the barber and to the movies - Ant Bully.

Need to do something fun before school starts so the kids remember that I'm still their dad.

You denigrate the resistor code.

Your question makes no sense. What is the reference level? 1 watt, 1 mW, 5 mW, 2.5 mW?

.5 microwatts is 63 dB below a Watt.
.5 nanowatts is 63 dB below a milliwatt.
2.5 nanowatts is 63 dB below 5 milliwatts.
1.25 nanowatts is 63 dB below 2.5 milliwatts. (Is this the one you want?)

2.5 milliwatts is 3 dB below 5 milliwatts.

See a pattern in any of this?

Mmmm. I see. You are a careerist in the electronics industry and it pisses you off that hobbyists have equal "status" as you in amatuer radio. I've run across a lot of that in the past 20 years...

YES!!!

If you are ever going to save your beloved Morse Code test, this is the only way you're going to do it.

No. It's MY point.

I think it is you who don't know where you're going with this discussion. It's gone beyond your having grief over your favorite mode to actually having to think about the future of the service.
Conggrats. Another couple of years of RRAP tutoring and you just might become a rational being.

Sure. But you have to ask yourself one question. Can the average VE administer such an exam? If not, can your average GS-7 FCC employee administer such an exam? If you set up an exam that only an engineer can administer, then your government isn't going to accept it. So be realistic in your zeal.

> Or the "pick the answer with the resistor like we showed you in the

The exam can be anything your VEC wants it to be. We learned this when the ARRL went from administering a Morse Code Exam at 5WPM to administering a Farnsworth Exam at 13-15WPM.

And today's exams still provide that "theory" though they don't prepare you to actually operate a radio - never did.

Then go for it.

It is the ONLY legitimate recourse you have for retaining the Morse Code exam.

Best of luck.

Are you drawing a pension from it? "Was."

Are you drawing a paycheck from it? "Is."

And it's so typical for Old Timers to forget that not everyone in the ARS are CAREERIST PROFESSIONALS. Bitching and Moaning about how everyone else doesn't know as much as them.

Welp, other than "can you get to the FCC office" things sure haven't changed much in 50 plus years.

Endorsement. Remember - your VE has to be smart enough to administer the exam.

Like I have time to drink. If you worked half the hours I do, you wouldn't have to sponge off your wife. I laugh because you amuse me with your delusion of being intelligent. Hell, I make more at my second job than you do selling shitboxes. Since you still have not said what you do for a living, I'll have to assume that selling amps is your only job and that you are supported by your wife. I'll bet she's proud.

I will resist it.

I am adivised I have legal right to do so, indeed should any news provider be persauded to terminate my access i t would give me the one thing my lawyer lacks to assure me of a postive result in litagation against Robeson and other parties.

Robesonn can stopp his assualt anytime

he can choose to leave or (I hope) he can choose to enage in discussion of radio related issues on the NG

Poor Morkie, he uses the word "commerce" three times in a row and only spells it right once. So much for that "college education" you claim you have.

As I said, you don't understand the situation enough to discuss it.
Radio comes under interstate commerce laws. ALL radio does.
Broadcast, public service, CB and ham, among others.

>how does Morse code relate to Comerce anyway?

It relates to radio, which the government has the power to regulate under its mandate to regulate interstate commerce.

>Interstate commerce gives the Congress the right to require Morse Code
>testing> Id love to TJ weigh in on that

It gives the government to require whatever doesn't violate the Constitution. And there's nothing in the Constitution prohibiting having to know code to get a ham license.

>of course in fact you are beyond any convincing you have decided that >Morse is somehow vital to Ham radio

Nope - I never claimed that it's vital. I never even claimed it's necessary. You just don't understand conversation.

One of the definitions of "away" is "distant". The Conditional exam was given "away from" the FCC office.

My oh my !!!

The Lavendar Lads of RRAP and rec.radio.(fill in the blank here)
are all so upset and moaning like stuck pigs in a barnyard pen because the TSA will no longer allow them to bring their giant-sized tubes of K-Y Warming Gel onto the airplane. It seems that our perverted ham radio 'butt-buddies' have been taping their air-pump powered penis toys to their leg prior to a long airline flight and once up in the air they were going into the restroom stall to "lube up" before going back to their seat all happy with the squeeze-bulb inside of their left pocket with the tray down to conceal their perverted activities. No nore boys! One of our RRAP pervs was at the airport yesterday and was crying the blues over having to dump his K-Y into the trash bin under the watchfull eyes of Bubba the 6'-2" big black TSA Officer. Bubba is no dummy either, he sent our RRAP friend (who hails from the South) thru to the full-body
X-Ray machine and his penis-pump showed up on the scan.
Casting a shi+ eating grin he then told ----- to "GET THAT THING
OFF YOUR LEG DAMMIT! YOU AIN'T GONNA BOARD NO PLANE WITH DAT ISLAMIC SEX TOY STRAPPED TO YO LEG...!" Poor -----! He just tore up his tickets and turned around and went home all mad and upset, when he turned the corner out of sight, Bubba, Tyrone and Kayshee each had then a good laugh session, slappin each other on the back and laughing to the point of crying tears over how the Bro's of The TSA busted yet another ham radio pervert trying to board an airline flight. Good job boys!

The End.

Baaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaa HAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!

You are failing (or choosing) to understand/acknowledge the difference between understanding the principles and simply rote memorising the answers. It used to be that there weren't a set of questions with corresponding answers - there was a syllabus from which the questions were set. It took understanding of the syllabus to apply the formulae that had been learnt to calculate the answer.

Even TODAY'S tests are not the same ie; Answer A in your study guide will cooresponds to Answer A on the exam. ANYONE "memorizing" those answers is nothing short of a FOOL. It is far better to read that book for what little it is worth - for what it will "TEACH" you to understand - thereby making passing the exam almost a done deal. UNDERSTANDING AND REMEMBERING (Memorizing if you will) the BASE material is what gets you through.

As the man said, at one time - there were no SET of exams. If you had no clue of electronics or rules and regulations where it came to Ham radio - you were "guranteed" to fail in front of the FCC. Often - that meant a long trip. Even at that - tests today - most VEs have at least 3 - 5 sets of exams per class. OR you could be given a test via computer which is randomly generated. So, to "memorize" ABCD just isn't going to cut it.

As I said before - ya got to memorize many things to get through life - your SS number, your birthdate, your name, how to spell, read, write, add, subtract, driving a vehicle, etc..... the list goes on - SURELY you didn't "memorize" a simple ABCD answer for MOST of that! Memorizing your SS number, name and birthdate may equivalate to the ABCD method, but - when you were tested in school for subjects - you had NO clue what was to be asked. If you didn't pay attention to what was being taught - you most likely bombed the test.

Again - we're splitting hairs here on the word "memorize". You can "try" to memorize ABCD to pass a test without studying (and hope the test conforms to the pattern you "memorized") OR you can MEMORIZE IT BY STUDYING it - (committ it to memory for life) -therby understanding the principles and being able to "honestly" answer the questions based on "knowledge" of the subject.

I seriously do NOT understand the hang up on this issue. Maybe "I" am missing something - but it seems to me, I had to memorize (LEARN) a whole list of shit to be able to function in a meaningful life. Your mind is like a computer - you have to program it (study) - to learn things TO MEMORIZE FOR LIFE. Simply trying to recall ABCD on a test without understanding the concepts - you're still going to be dumb as shit even if you do pass. Wouldn't you rather "know" what you're supposed to know? Sure makes one look a bit more inteliigent.
Maybe that is why so many people are so goofy on the highways - they "memorized" answers to the test instead of actually "learning" what the principle were/are. Makes sense to me! For those of you who parachute or do other "life endangering" tasks - I'd sure hate to be you - depending on someone who simply "memorized" ABCD on a test as opposed to "learning" the requirements to fulfill the task.

No wonder this world is so screwed up..... TOO LAZY TO "LEARN".

It is true that the 1950's License Manuals were not multiple choice but the exams were. The License Manuals went like this:

Q: What is the unit of electrical resistance?

A: The unit of electrical resistance is the ohm.

The exam then had multiple choices, one of them being "ohm".

It is hard to understand how anyone could develop that correct answer from first principles or formulas. I memorized the correct answer and it still exists in my memory as something
I once memorized long before I ever knew there was a man named Ohm after whom the unit of electrical resistance was named.

The difference between memorizing the question pool answers from the 1950's License Manuals and memorizing the question pool answers of today is just splitting hairs. I used exactly the same memorizing techniques to ace the Extra exam in 2000 as I did to pass the Conditional exam in 1953.

Well Steve, how am I violating Federal Law, you have yet to answer, and I'm sure there are some on here that would like to know. It seems to me that you have an opinion, and an opinion are like cetain part of the human body, everyone has one.In the past you've stated that I'm violating federal law and again and I emphasis how. In the future if you accuse someone of breaking the law I urge you to be able to back it up. I think we have run this subject into the ground. Steve let be the first one to say, you have the right to opinion and I repect that right. But for you to come on here and to quote a violations of the law and not being able to back it up and are confronted with it, then you should say it is your opinion, and not the law. I think you know what I'm talking about Steve. I would like to take this time and give thanks to all the postive feed back on this, the only real negative feedback is from Steve

Thank you for your interest Steve,

Mr Robeson is a welcome poster. He has always tried to help others and post on topic.

YOU,otoh, have gone out of your way to post gay filth here. I have copies of YOUR posts to prove it. YOU are not welcome here you filty sodomite!

aren't you in violation of the states sodomy laws??

Selective amnesia. "No one had to memorize anything" prior 1992.
Not in grade school, not in college, not in industry, not in real life. Strange perception...

>Ummm? There's no Morse Code test anymore?

The International Morse Code test for United States amateur radio license classes General and Extra have NEVER GONE AWAY.

That is especially true in the perception of the ARRL which still manages to insert the "necessities" for morsemanship in nearly everything it publishes. It's been six decades since Hiram Percy became ultimate DX but they still keep on with their demand that all [US] amateurs be proficient in that old mode.

Klein fears CHANGE and, perhaps, feelings of obsolescence.

Someone who has been a regular worker in electronics (radio is a subset of electronics) ought to damn well know and recognize that the state of the art in electronics has been CONSTANTLY changing. It's sometimes a chore to keep up, whether it be 1950 or 2000 or any time in-between.

I've run across a lot of that my entire life. :-)

I think Klein wants recognition as a "professional amateur" or "amateur professional." I'm not sure which...

This is an indicator that Klein isn't used to computer-modem communications. He isn't looking beyond his own screen and understanding that others are separated from it in time and space.
"He" was obviously talking about "old days" of "His." He is not considering that others do not share his viewpoints.

Considering the Type of Oscillator and "names," he has put Names as somehow "essential" to the circuit. NO SUCH THING.
An oscillator is simply an amplifier of just-barely-past-unity gain with positive feedback. The Names were tacked on by academics long, long ago as IDENTIFICATION of the general form of amplification-with-positive-feedback.

One can build a Colpitts oscillator, make it work, and continue calling it a Hartley. Won't make a bit of difference to the circuit...electrons don't give a damn about human labels. They work by THEIR laws, not humans' with their imperative labels.

By the way, on a quick bit of checking, I've got text references to about 11 different oscillator forms, not just two (with his unknown third type)...and I'm not counting free-running multivibrators which are also very much an "oscillator."

The only way to "save his beloved morse code test" is to have the ARRL exercise some BETTER brainwashing than it has been doing for decades. The League is still trying to use its old persuasion and, so far, hasn't been able to get memberships from the 3/4 of all licensed US radio amateurs who are NOT ARRL members...

I disagree, Brian. Klein is a MORSEMAN. They don't change.
They are rooted in old days long gone, brainwashed early into thinking that morsemanship is "essential" to "best" radio communication. It isn't...easily proved by ALL the OTHER radio services giving up on morse code as a mode (if they had it once) or never requiring it since a radio service began.

Klein hasn't considered the simple fact that, by law, the VEs do NOT have to be trained test-adminsters. They are simply VOLINTEERS who have the requisite license class and GIVE OF THEIR OWN TIME to adminster tests. VEs are accountable only to the FCC in that volunteer testing. VEs' only "penalty" in mis-administering an amateur test is a reduction in license class or forteiture of their amateur license.

Klein and his "tests aren't like they were in 'my' time"
bitchers and moaners HAD their chance to keep privatization in testing from happening long ago. Legal means to stop it by NPRM Commentary didn't make their case. Privatization happened for BOTH amateur and commercial licenses. Now their whine is long past its time and has turned to vinegar.

True enough, Brian, but expect ten kinds of flak from the other morsepersons in here on that... :-)

The VEC can LEGALLY generate a Question Pool with ONE HUNDRED times the minimum required number of questions. With electronic transmittal over the Internet the Question Pool can be updated within 24 hours to ALL VE groups.

Say the FCC requires a minimum of 50 questions on a written test element. If the VEC QPC generates the Question-Answer pool with FIVE THOUSAND QUESTIONS (and answers), it should be obvious that mere "memorization" sufficient to pass that written test element is out of the question. Anyone who CAN memorize that prodigious amount is already gifted as an eidetic and those are extremely rare among humans.

What all that concentration on the "written tests" is about is just a DIVERSION to keep from replying on the singular morse code test continuation. The morsemen just haven't been able to come up with sufficently-valid reasons to keep the morse test (other than the emotional ones) so they smoke-screen by bringing up the writtens. Old tactic of theirs.

Darn you "kids!" Weren't any of those newfangled gizmos like "satellites" when I was in the Army. :-)

The AN/PRC-8 backpack VHF transceivers (one of which I wore in PIP Training) also had VFO frequency control along with a built-in "crystal calibrator." Nothing like the "channel selection" of a later synthesized AN/PRC-25 (also FM on VHF).

Interesting engineering feat with that VFO control over a military temperature and vibration environment. Copied from the old SCR-300 "walkie-talkie" of WW2, devised by Motorola (also FM on VHF). But, I digress, that was Practical Theory as applied by professional engineering, used by professional military people...didn't have the majesty of AMATEURISM and all its nobility (and class distinctions).

Good grief, all that crying and wailing over Test Privatization!
Maybe we should take up a collection to send him some Kleenex?

Seems to me that COLLEGE-level course tests that I took had a LOT of memorization. Maybe we should all slam the academic world for doing the same "memorization?" Hey, why not, all those who failed college level courses can get a Wailing Wall!

My state drivers' license testing is done from multiple-choice and that requires MUCH memorization of the applicable laws.
While the CA DMV does not publish the EXACT answers, the have lots and lots of examples, not only well-publicized but available free in little booklets at each DMV office. Maybe Klein wants me to take an ME degree course in automotive engineering just to drive our Malibu MAXX? :-)

Brian, if you check out the "official" history of the ARRL you will find out that they BEGAN in trying to circumvent
the commercial telegram system with a relaying of messages past the commercial boundaries and FEES. If that were reported today, the journalists would call it "hacking."

I hope he tries it. I'm anxious to find out how much hostility he will engender from his fellow amateurs who are VEs...how they have to spend many more hours (of their own time) in testing

each license applicant (separately). Ought to go over like a

Klein has yet to define his own label, whether it is "professional amateur" or "amateur professional." He seems undecided.

I'm one of the (chronological) Olde Fahrts in this group but I pray to God that I won't ever get as bad as some of them with their retro attitudes and fixations with modes of their long-ago youth, the ultra importance of CLASS and RANK. Geez.

You'd think that some of them regard amateur radio like the USMC! ["the few, the ultra proud (of morsemanship)"]

>> Let's have a test that

Some of these Olde Fahrts seem to think their amateurism is on some kind of "higher plane" than ordinary, plebian, work.
They be BETTER than the pros and keep reinforcing each other with that pipe-dream. After all, the ARRL keeps reminding them of their greatness, their "service to their country" (by having their hobby). To hear them talk the nation would immediately fall apart without these federally-licensed hobbyists!

We'll have to get Mr. Webster to work coming up with a better definition of the hobby. Is it "professional amateurism" or "amateur professionalism?" I opt for the latter but others may differ.

Beep, beep...

I fear that Leonard H. Anderson will go to his reward without ever having obtained an amateur radio license.

That's all you've done since your recent reappearance here, Major Hoople.

Obtaining an amateur radio license is work, Len. Some of the amateur radio activities we partcipate in are are work. The work isn't compensated. It is performed for the love of it. If you ever hope to obtain an amateur radio license, you'll have to indulge in some ordinary, plebian work.

Fewer people would get confused by posts if dBm instead of dB were used when transmit power level or receiver sensitivity is spoken. I know I would.

dB being a relative measure should only be used when speaking of a component like an attenuator or amplifier not a level of power and just invites the possibility of confusing the reader.

It's certainly not part of the discussion.

You still don't understand (or want to acknowledge) the difference between learning that Ohm was a scientist after whom the unit of resistance was named, and "the answer to the question with the 10k resistor is 'greater'".

Even with the resistor color code, most of us MEMORIZED
a jingle like:
Bad Boys Rape Our Young Girls But Violet Gives Willingly
I believe the military used to teach their technicians to MEMORIZE that jingle. Exactly how does one develop the resistor color code from first principles?

The issue is that if there's something wrong with the tests, that is not the fault of the test takers. It is the fault of the test designers. Given a person with a PhD in electronics, 50 years experience, and capable of doing 50 wpm in Morse code, all he can do presently is pass the present day test requirements and then be belittled by people like you who are inferior to him in every way.

Of course I understand. When I took my Conditional exam,
I didn't know Mr. Ohm from a hole in the ground. I simply MEMORIZED that the ohm was the unit of resistance. I had no idea how to know that except by MEMORIZATION.

I don't care who it was derected at

Gay bashing is gaybashing in some places it itself is a criminal offense

It never has a place in radio Newgroup

you can indeed type what you want, I certainly can't legaly stop you OTOH so can I

I realy fail to understand why the bulk of posts even the bulk of posts

you are a clearly a poor ham as maeasured by the amateur code

you clealy have this notion that that rules have ever required thing NOT in the rules

you are rude and abusive (and then to top that object to being treated the same by others)

that you are rude enough to call a man you have never met useless as ignored out of coutesy not missed

the fact is Ham radio sound very miuch like cb NOW on HF and VHF the sound in many areas is all but silence

Mark, would you put these five steps on your web blog for me? Thanks. I also want to try to get the moon bouncers to help us out. I think by puting the five steps on your website, a lot more hams will see and agree the five steps are a good idea. TNX, 73

SC

Step 1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

Step 2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

Step 3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Step 4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Step 5: Cancel your league membership until they decide to work to improve things.

There's two ways to learn: 1. Memorize knowledge, 2. develop knowledge from first principles. You hate memorization so you must love first principles.

Klink, can't you get ANYTHING right?

My purpose in here is trying to get the morse code test(s) an amateur radio license. I am a professional in electronics, have had my Commercial license since 1956, am retired from a career in aerospace electronics with a nice income.

I don't NEED a ham license nor am I trying to get one.
I'm trying to change the federal law concerning all ham-hobbyists being required to test for morse in this advanced time of the new millennium.

Not to worry, Klink, I'll be watching the US Post Office

You keep right on looking down your Imperial nose at all us who aren't federally licensed as super-dooper morsemen. It makes you feel all warm and toasty, does it? I'll bet you run around and make like a Prussian feldoffizier to all

No, I won't, Kernal Klunk.

I didn't parlay a disk jockey job into fleecing the State Department in being resident ham DX. Cushy. Now you are getting a pension for all that "hard work." Taxpayers are paying you. Hardly "plebian" of YOU, is it?

But, having NO answers to my remarks, you made up a lot of scurrilous snit on your own. "For the love of it?"

Must have been...it sure as hell had NO ring of "diplomacy" to
it. Didn't learn much about diplomacy at State, Klank?

Next time, Coolonell, try TRY to answer some of the topics that were addressed...even if NOT to you. Do it "for the

There's a difference between memorizing a formula or method and memorizing specific answers to specific questions. The former is called learning, and can be applied to many situations. The latter is called laziness, and teaches nothing that can be used for any other purpose.

Indeed. Todd has stolen the name from Omega One, LLC, whose site can be found at http://www.omegaone.com. I'm sure that they won't appreciate Todd coming along and "appropriating" their registered trademark after they have been in business as Omega One for nine years.

Maybe I'll drop them a line at info@omegaone.com and suggest that they have their lawyers write a cease and desist letter to Todd.

That would probably make Todd soil his pants (again).

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^
And you would go to such a measure to expose the likes of Todd? I mental child? Why? What would it gain you?
You cannot give Todd cause to cease and desist much like you cannot give Mork reason to cease and desist. Meld two mental incompetents into the same folder and you get mental deficiencies times two.
Mork and Todd are but two peas in the same pod and no amount of cajoling will ever cause either to learn the meaning of Common Sense.

Thank you for the info on Omega One. I will look into it, check the veracity of your statement, and if necessary, file a complaint.
No matter how it works out, I will not waste any time trying to listen to Todd's out-of-band transmissions. The guy is long renowned for being less than intelligent.

First off that person, NO9GL is not me and it is not even a vaild amateur radio callsign. Omega One, which your refering to is a PDA software maker. to be in violation of Copyright/tradmark violation I would have to be using the mark to confuse the customer. Omega One Radio is a Shortwave broadcast station, NOT a PDA software make, So there is No confusion of the two. Where did you study Copyright/Tradmark Law?? I would REALLY suggest you read copyright/trademark Law before you go around spouting your mouth. As for being less intelligent, the only one who less intelligent here is you and your lack of understanding of Law

That is just hair-splitting. For instance, the first question in my 2000 Extra Class License Manual is: What exclusive frequency privileges in the 80-meter band are authorized to Extra class control operators?

Of the four choices, the correct answer is 3500-3525 kHz.

Now what formula or method will yield the correct answer?
I simply memorized that specific answer to that specific question. The moral is: "Work smarter, not harder!"

If you are learning theory that someone has already developed, you are memorizing answers. I memorized Ohm's law for my Novice exam. I memorized the fact that 'I' is the letter used for current.

If you are not memorizing answers provided by the people who developed the theory, then you are necessarily developing the theory from first principles.

Avoiding memorizing answers to questions is a good way to keep making the same mistakes over and over. Do you avoid the Q&A sections of all web pages for fear that you might accidentally memorize an answer?

Which is exactly what "I" also have said. They're splitting hairs over the definition. MANY words can be used in more than one way. Your example is resembling mine. There are some things (many actually) you must "memorize" (learn) for life - to function. To simply "memorize" answers for a test - as you said, teaches NOTHING. It doens't even guarantee passing. I've seen a few fail by that method. IT simply is NOT a good way to go about things in life. Laziness gets you no where - fast.

So exactly what is the "formula or method" for determining Extra frequency privileges outside of memorizing them? I was too lazy to use a formula so I just memorized only what I needed to know for my Extra exam. I still don't know all the Extra frequencies for all the bands. Since Extras have all frequency privileges,
I don't really need to know where those frequencies are.

In the example YOU give - Cecil - it could be taken either way. In the case of the "frequencies" you're to operate on for a given license and band - YES - you could simply "memorize" (not really commit to memory) those frequencies - for the exam purposes and just refer to a chart from there in. OR you COULD "memorize" them (actually committing to memory) for the purpose of NOT having to use a chart! However, once you use those frequencies after a while - especially if active - then you "would" tend to "memorize" (for life) those frequencies. Yes, it is definately splitting hairs!

I've already gotten it right. You aren't a participant in amateur radio and you'll likely never be a participant in amateur radio. It really is that simple.

No one needs an amateur radio license for his existence. No one should obtain one if he doesn't want such a license. In you, we have someone who neither needs nor wants an amateur radio license and who spends his time in an amateur radio newsgroup, advocating changes in an endeavor in which he is not a participant and has no intention of becoming a Morsemen? Hell, you aren't a radio amateur of any kind.

None of my neighbors are licensed amateur radio ops, Len. That they have no amateur radio license bothers me not in the least. Why is "Imperial" capitalized?

It is as plebian as anyone else who receives a pension for his work.

I didn't make up any of it, Len.

I learned quite a bit. Sometimes there's a carrot and stick. Sometimes there's just a carrot. Sometimes there's just a stick.

What topics were addressed to you by Al Klein when you decided to make your views known? What topics were addressed to you by K4YZ when you decided to make your views known?

Laziness allows one to achieve a goal by the most efficient route. Some famous German military leader said he would lots rather have brilliant and lazy officers than ambitious and stupid ones. I personally would rather see brilliant and lazy amateur radio operators than ambitious and stupid ones hanging on for dear life to an obsolete testing requirement.

Here's the crux of your communications problem. From Webster's:
"memorize - to commit to memory". Everything that one memorizes is the act of committing something to memory. You definitely need to pick a different word than "memorize" to describe the concept you are trying to present. Memorizing is how human beings remember things and it is a good thing.

Dear Mr. Robeson,

Thank-you for your e-mail of 01 August 2006

In reference to your inquiry, no such unit "HMC 47 CSB (PROVISIONAL)" has ever been located at Ft Sill. Furthermore I find no reference to any "214 FA BRIGADE" at Ft Sill or any other US Army facility.

WILLIAM C ANDERS JR

the above is quote from steve recent post

he said he was going to write and try to comfrim my service in HMC 47th

CSB (provisional) then part of 214th FA 3 copr art Ft Sill ok

I knew he would not confrim the current location of the 47 csb at sill indeed the unit I believe has been reorgaized out of existance although the paerent unit of the formation the 47 th Feild Hospital likely remerges from this I have heard they may be a irag but I frankly don't know or realy much care

I did not expect steve to dare say the 214th does not exist (it does http://sill-www.army.mil/3ca/214web/214th.htm)

but I welcome it as it serves as proof that Robeson has lied us and therfore the claims I and other have made about his veracity (or rather the lack there of) inthat post the Major Of Cap has choosen to fake a comincation from the US Army it itself. inded after this how can anything he has claimed about any DoD matter be trusted

I had expected that Robeson would wander off for awhile like the coward

he is to lick his wounds but he clearly lack the good sense to do that so as needed I will keep reminding him

Eh, excuse me, it was not "I" who started splitting hairs here with regard to MEMORY AND MEMORIZATION.
"I" KNOW what "memorization" means - I was using it in the "SLANG" sense that YOU all are arguing about - memorizing something for just a few moments of need as opposed to a "lifetime". There ARE "SLANG" uses for popular words which do NOT coincide necessarily with Webster. Again, it was not "I" who started this ridiculous argument.

AND for what it is worth - if you're (whoever this applies to) that freaking lazy to not want to have to "learn" something - then it is no damned wonder this country is going to hell. The downfall of our Education system begins with that very principle (refusal to learn). I don't give a crap WHAT Hitler or some other idiot said about being lazy and smart - if you're lazy - you are no damned good to society or yourself for that matter. The REST of us who have to pick up the pace to deal with the slackers. I'll be damned if I ever hire a "LAZY" smart person. I want a person who is going to EARN their keep. Sitting there telling me how things should be isn't what I would hire them for - the purpose is to DO the things as they're supposed to be done.

Working smarter - not harder - is a good concept - but I DO NOT THINK - the originator of it meant for LAZY asses to be using it as an EXCUSE to not have to learn. I live by that concept (work smarter - not harder) often but it sure in hell hasn't stopped me from having to - OR DESIRING to LEARN.

Sorry, my unabridged dictionary doesn't acknowledge a slang definition for "memorize" as it certainly does for other words used as slang. You really need to find another word to use to define your concept. You seem to be talking about temporary storage, the exact opposite of memorizing.

A brilliant lazy person knows that having the answer within arm's reach is just as effective as knowing the answer and probably much more efficient. At this very

Now you're trying to be a smart "ass" (there's some slang for ya) :) .
Again, it was not "MY" argument here - splitting hairs. AND as for thinking,
I think you ought to go back a couple days or better and reread the threads.
Unlike some in this ridiculous argument, I DO think.. I THINK IT IS CRAZY.
Don't you all have something better to do? I don't care what "YOUR" dictionary shows. There are some out there for example which show the word COCK for example - as a type of Bird OR the preparing of a rifle or gun for firing and leave it at that - while a "few" others will show the "Slang" term used - as many do - meaning sexual organ. SO - ALL DICTIONARYS ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL. What may not show up in YOUR dictionary as slang - may certainly - in others. AND perhaps it was a "misuse" of the word
"Memorize" - I was merely trying to rationalize where you AND AL Klein both were coming from. Now, neither one of you make any sense - he argues against memory and you against having to do any work. MANY people "misuse" words - very much and very badly. MY (mis)use was ONLY intended for the sake of this STUPID argument.

Steve, you may be quite right!

There is NO expression from these federally-authorized morsemen of amateur radio being a HOBBY. [it is a "service" to the country or something para-military...and "hobby" is not in the Rules (except by definition)] Indeed, they bristle and come unglued at the slightest negativism of their mighty endeavors of "professional amateurism" with all its rank, status, and glory.
Ham radio can't be just "fun" for its own sake, an enjoyable pastime, something done for personal pleasure. No, one has to enjoy ONLY Their views, like what they like, or suffer the consequences of being considered "lower caste" on par with river-bottom slime.

These mighty macho morsemen demand OBEDIANCE to their views and opinions, are quick to call disbelievers any name they choose, always denigrative, condescending, with heavy overtones of attempted humiliation. They are the unforgiving in regards to anyone NOT worshiping their status, rank, titles in amateurism.
Unforgiving to the point of attacking ANYONE against them.
They RULE. [they think...but only in here...]

While these mighty macho morsemen take out their frustrations, resentments, anger against all not idolizing their opinions,
there are some actual amateur radio issues which need addressing.
The removal or continuation of the morse code test for US amateur radio license testing is still in limbo; official Comment period on the NPRM was over late last year. Access BPL recently had a rules revision/addendum added by the FCC with a Report and Order released on 7 August 2006. No one in here apparently cares about it since the "ARRL is on the job," "fighting" to keep HF "safe"
(for their membership?). [ho, ho, some "fight"...]

No one cares to discuss two BIG issues. Everyone is busy, busy, trying to insult anyone who doesn't subscribe to Their views.
Ain't no "discussion" here, hasn't been for years. Internecine personal warfare is the order of the day. Everyone in here either obeys the rulings of Big Brother in Newington or they are considered lower forms of (barely) life.

The number of US amateur radio licensees is slowly dropping (expirations greater than new licensees to the tune of 10K in three years). Membership in the ARRL (the "representative" of all, according to them) has never been more than a quarter of all US licensees. Technician class licensees are very very close to being a full half of all classes (49.07% of all individual licensees as of 12 Aug 06).

Lettuce all bow our heads and worship morsemanship...these are the salad days of the brass-pounders. Morse is the answer to everything I'm told. [over and over again] :-)

Beep, beep...

For a short time, you had my attention as being correct at least part of the time - in this ongoing dumb argument. But here's where we part ways - "along with the "memory" deal - which "I" didn't start.

A "brilliant" "lazy" person - isn't worth a dime. Brilliant ? BY WHO's DEFINITION? I have a ton of books in my reach too - so whats your point? Yes, SOME are "reference" books - but many I spent hours in "STUDYING". It is the "reference" books I use for things not used daily or even at times month to month. Books on hobbies I have but not enough time to get into as much - or repair manuals for my test equipment - should I need to do so. Having a ton of books at arms length doesn't substitute for KNOWLEDGE OR WORK. Those "books" sure in hell aren't going to "troubleshoot" equipment for me to earn my pay. They're not going to diagnose my body to heal me. They're not going to fix my vehicle "just" by having them at arms length. They may make you LOOK smart! They won't "make" you a Ham operator, Nuclear Physicist, Doctor, Lawyer, Mechanic, etc.
SO what - you can pull (legal/physics/etc) laws out or Meds and dosages, spark plug clearances and so on - BIG DEAL. anyone with half a brain can do that. Even those who busted their ass to get to the top have to keep "working" at it to STAY at the top. Even today, Bill Gates - smart as he is, I'm sure is still working on "something". I'm sure he doesn't sit there with his ton of "reference" books at arms length - and do NOTHING. And I'm DAMNED sure - he had to study long and hard to learn all he knows to get to where he is today. I will bet my last dime he would tell you himself - it wasn't easy. It took LOTS of hard work, dedication, studying, committment, TRIAL AND ERROR - to make things work. TRIAL AND ERROR doesn't get done sitting on your ass. NOTHING worth while - does. UNLESS of course that so called "brilliant" "lazy" person is collecting a welfare check - smart yes - but not enough to be gainfully employed. Ya know - I have knowledge of a man who can recite transistor theory and much much more - formulas and all from his head. BUT - the poor bastard can't even solder. He has NO clue on how to troubleshoot or repair. So, tell me - what good is it to JUST be "brilliant"? AND AGAIN - BY WHO'S STANDARDS? Hell, I've known supposedly slow and/or "mentally retarded" people that put so called "knowledgeable" people to shame. They talked with more sense, didn't assume they knew everything and sure in hell weren't afraid to TRY to work. Those who "CLAIM" to know everything - usually aren't worth a plugged nickle. We ALL have something to "learn" each and every day of our lives. Anyone who thinks otherwise or that they know it all - are DEAD already. They won't get anywhere in life. "I" for one will NEVER EVER claim I know "everything". I LOVE to learn new things and look forward to each new adventure - be it repairing something - tackling a new problem never seen before to learning things to do with my "other" activities that take up many hours of my life. In THOSE fields - "knowing it all" can get you KILLED.

Sorry dude - I jumped track from agreeing with you..... Pick it apart all you want. LAZY DOES NOT WORK - no matter which way you cut it. I'm leaning in the direction that you've apparently bought one of those GET RICH QUICK WITHOUT WORKING books..... SORRY DUDE - THEY DON"T WORK.

And as for "Hitler" claiming that - as you said about his admiration for a brilliant lazy man - eh..... last I heard - the man was a fruit cake, lost the war, cost thousands of lives, innocent ones at that - and ended up committing suicide - WHAT A LOSER. And I would want to follow his examples/principles - why?

You still don't understand the difference between memorizing facts and memorizing answers.

Those weren't the answers, they were the facts that allowed you to

The people who developed the theory in the 19th century didn't "develop" the answers to tests created in the 20th century.

Then you must be an expert in avoidance, since you keep making the same mistake post after post. Memorizing theory is NOT the same as memorizing test answers. If information and test answers were the same, owning a book with the information needed to answer the questions on any test given in any public school would probably be illegal in all 50 states.

The same hair splitting as the difference between stealing money and

But, since you don't know the difference between "learning" and "memorizing", nor which subjects fall into which category, you probably can't see the parallel.

There's no need for you to even know that you can use a radio to talk to people.

There's a need, if we want a ham license to say that the holder of said license has achieved a certain level of technical competence, to test for that competence. Otherwise all the license says is "I have this piece of paper with ink on it".

that is a chnge in tune

oncce you accpet that much of the testing involves memizztion the question then comes down to where is your beef?
if it is that today we then to use multiguess questions pools verus short answer of bygone day you likely out of luck the extra cost is not going to be supported within the present system

I agree short answer would be an improvement over multible guess but teks you issue up with other don't imply that the ams that have taken you tread awfully close to libel there AL ask an lawyer if you don't at pesent their is no different when I learn the text of the right answer to a given I leraned the answer to that question

there is no difference, none at all, for some of the materail the only rational way of approuching it is memorization, for other section you can learn some part of the underlying theroy and use it but short of the Full course of Eltromatic Theroy I hadin colledge you don't learn much can you describe and USE Maxwell's equation? I can I found the knowledge very helpfull on the rf safety question in the pools, butstill useless without memorizing certain facts that have set as arbitary level in the regs

the fact I need to an rf eval at at 51 watts on 2m is not something I can know from guasses equation although guass' law allow me to easily

From my dictionary: "cock - 5. Slang (vulgar) a. penis. b. sexual relations with a man."

Seems my 2230 page unabridged dictionary covers slang very well but does not have a slang definition for "memorize". Please try again.

In that, I tend to agree with you. I would like to leading to one brotherhood of amateur radio operators devoid of the jealousy, pecking order, and back-biting

Learning is impossible without memorizing. You are simply ignorant of the definition of the words you are using. Is English your second language? Again, from Websters: "memorize - to commit to memory"

I have a question for " an old friend ".

I noticed that you have a difficult time with writing the English language, with regards to spelling and grammar, etc, but you do try to get the thought across. I have a dyslexic daughter with the same problem, and her teachers in grade school used to flunk her thinking she did not know answers to the test questions, when actually, she really did know and understand, but was afraid to write them out because of her dyslexia and the resultant laughter and snickering that followed. When we all caught on to this finally, we demanded that she be tested aurally, where she was asked the questions out loud, and responded verbally with the answers instead of writing things out. This made a hell of a difference in assessing her learning and understanding during her education in the early years. As her father, I was hard on her because of the frustration she caused us at first when we did not understand what was really happening, and I still feel guilty about it to this day.

Are you a native North American, or are you an immigrant? When you did your ham test, or any test, did the teachers/instructors make these allowances or alternate testing methods for you also? Were they easy on you, or did they show frustration? Did they understand where you were coming from? Did you have a pleasant attitude to deal with? I am not making fun of you. This is a serious question. Thanks,

Jack

I don't care what your dictionary says. PEOPLE MISUSE words ALL the time - and definately in this case. "I" again STATE - "I" DID NOT START the "hair splitting" argument. I was merely trying to rationalize where BOTH of you were coming from and sadly neither of you know yourselves. AGAIN I SAY - THIS WHOLE FREAKING ARGUMENT IS - STUPID.

OK, so maybe I misrepresented your quote "by accident" - big deal. HITLER was still a loser as was/is ANY ONE who bought/buys into that STUPID philosophy you spoke of. Pretty damned sad when you - speaking of ANYONE it applies to - are too "lazy" to "learn". That is almost laughable. Creative thinking - without knowledge? Surely you jest!

I'm done arguing with someone who is "too" lazy to "learn". I'd prefer to talk to those who have "intelligence" to refer to - to stimulate the conversation. Good luck in your monologue.

This was a WWI German officer and I don't recall his name.
Why do you think he was an idiotic strategist? Why do you think he single-handedly lost WWI? If you know so much about him, what was his name?

The pride, lust, and greed usually accompanying ambition are

Let me rephrase my original statement. Learning something means you can actually use what you learn. It is more than the ability to parrot what you have memorized. You can memorize the answers from the back of the Teacher's Edition of a textbook, but you are not LEARNING anything. This is exactly what you are doing when you memorize the answers to a pool of questions. You don't KNOW anything. If you LEARN the material, you can take any given set of parameters and formulate an answer to anything you need to know, WITHOUT having to go to the shelf to look it up in a book (which, BTW, you can't do when you're needing complex mathematical equation to figure out the frequency of resonance for a capacitance of 120pF and an inductance of 3uH (or the x of c or x of l for such a circuit).

Of course, none of this means anything to an appliance operator.

Appliance operator: n. c. 1985 An amateur radio operator who knows only enough to tune the VFO on his radio and speak into the microphone. Some advanced appliance operators know enough to connect other peripheral devices such as digital mode devices or power amplifiers, but do not know how these devices work, nor how to construct such devices.

An amateur radio license is an entry level license. It is not a university degree. When I obtained all amateur privileges at the age of 15, I didn't know squat. All I had done is memorize the ARRL License Manual. Six years later I had a EE degree. What is wrong with learning the technical stuff after one obtains his entry level license?

Do you know how to construct an IC-756PROII?

A MENSA membership means you have a high intelligence quotient. A high intelligence quotient does not necessarily mean you know anything, only that if you apply yourself that you have the ability to learn more easily than an average person. I know some very lazy MENSA members that can't even spell a large number of the words they use.

In other words, even people above average intelligence can be and often are too lazy to learn. They do manage to apply what they do know better than most.

For a long time, they were.

The coding system was similar to that for resistors, but there were additional stripes or dots to denote voltage rating.

Here here (!)
Cecil, I'm happy to agree with you.

Modern testing techniques are intended to be transparent. This is true for FCC exams, Postal exams, any and all government qualification exams.
(And because of this, all qualifying exams in the private sector, as well.)

It took a lot of litigation to get there. Government agencies had to prove that their qualifying exams were directly linked to the specific tasks required of the given position for which the individual was applying.

A Postal Carrier needn't know Pythagorus' theorum to deliver the mail.
I took the Postal Carrier exam 35 years ago and did not do well. I wasn't good at sorting on a timed basis.

This notion of a "cheapening" of FCC requirements because the question pool is open to the public is a red herring: transparency is the rule. If you look at the question pool and study it, you will gain the necessary expertise to pass the exam. This is not cheating, nor is it short-circuiting the "REAL" ham radio "requirements" that some view as sacrosanct.

I used ARRL manuals to pass the Extra Exam and I do not defer to anyone in this regard. Does this make me a ham radio genius? Not AT ALL. Man, I have SO MUCH to learn. This newsgroup is "potentially" very helpful! For that, I give thanks.

You know, I love ham radio. I'm happy so many join the ranks each year. If there still is a concern out there, be an Elmer and address it.

To me, MENSA is a sort of "Who's Who". As such, one can value it appropriately or ignore it completely. To me, it's a sort of conundrum:
If you are confident in your intelligence, why do you need validation?
Is it the obverse of the T-shirt "I'm with stupid"?

My apologies for adding to this old and fraying thread.

Mensa - who gives a damned? Most of the "brilliant" people I've ever met - had their thumbs up their ass when it came to doing the basic things in life - they can't do them. What the hell good is a "brilliant" person if they're too stupid to know how or lazy to do "basic" things? If having a Mensa number means you're bankrupt in common sense or "lazy", I'd rather not be a member - thank you. Often, it is "common sense" which gets you through - NOT "brilliance". From all I've ever heard and /or seen - "brilliance" and "common sense" don't go hand in hand. Sitting in a chair with a bunch of books behind you to make you "appear" smart and not getting off your lazy ass to use it or to further your education - is not a "productive" person. I know a few welfare bums who fall into that description- "appear" smart, "act" smart - lazy as hell. Being in the center of a University Library with books on most any subject - is NOT going to make you any more intelligent if you don't venture to "learn". Even at that, if you don't use it, you lose it.

This is funny as all hell..... some shmuck "claiming" to be a "genious" coming in here and trying to make the rest of us seem inferior to him. No one is any better than the rest of us. Their crap doesn't stink any less than ours. Just when he starts losing his grip on the argument, he pulls this so called mensa number out - just like a race card. So, what, we're supposed to take pity? Bow down? I don't think so! The answer to that is "PLONK".
There was another party a few years ago tried that - and after about a month - him and his self proclaimed "geniousness" - disappeared. The idea here is to come in - share ideas, thoughts, "help" if possible - NOT try to place yourself on a throne above all. I can assure you the majority of us don't tolerate that attitude. You can agree or agree to disagree on any use of words, theories, laws, principles, strategies, etc. But when you put yourself on a pedestal..... the game is over - you'll either find one of your mensa friends to keep you company or be an awful lonely person on here.

To respond to a statement regarding me in a previous post - Hams like "me" NEVER kept or attempted to keep any one off the air. If anything, I've gotten people "involved" in Amateur Radio - with one (12 years old at the time) going on to higher education once out of high school - and getting a very good job from it. His parents couldn't thank me enough. Even if that is the only good example of the good I am/was able to do - in Amateur Radio, then I'm satisfied. But I haven't stopped there..... I teach Amateur Radio classes when asked - and on other occasions - I've taught basic electronics - taking those folks beyond the Study Guide.
It is nice to be able to "use" and "impart" that knowledge so that others can benefit.

I don't know if there is actually any truth to this BUT - the dumbing down "allegedly" started back in Reagan's day or was it George Srs? - when someone here in the U.S. apparently couldn't pass the exam - and being he was in good relations with the then King of Jordan, the King of Jordan asked Reagan or Bush Sr to do something to help out. I've heard that story a few times. True or not - the tests have changed drastically.

The tests really (in my opinion) aren't meant to "teach" anything or shall we say - show any "in depth proficiency". The study guides give you "just" enough to pass the exam - without going into a lot of information. You certainly can't pass a novice OR extra exam and instantly qualify yourself as an Electronics Technician. The material just isn't that in depth. For that matter, the GROL tests and accompanying manuals don't do a hell of a lot either for "teaching" - or showing "proficiency". They're merely meant to get you in the door - period. The latter is scary - considering that the GROL though diminished in need in most cases as of this point in time - IS still required in "some" cases - as a sign of "knowledge" of the subject. That is why many places that I know of, produce their own exams - designed to actually test your knowledge. One guy I know - been in 2 way radio for years, good at it, smart as a whip - took an entry exam to get a new job. Said that was the most in depth - "drilling" - organized test he ever took, considering he had his Commercial license "pre- GROL" and his amateur license.

I have read articles from a leading publication in the industry that there is a move afoot to get the FCC Commercial License - some teeth put back in. Why? - Due to an increasing issue with interference and so on. Seems to me, though in some cases - the horses are already out of the barn and "maybe" too late to try to close the doors, changes "could" be made. What gets me, is that article spoke of another agency doing the testing and licensing. So - in other words - the FCC - our "RADIO" governing agency has lost its grip on this? IF the FCC can't control it, how the hell is some "private" agency? Not that it would happen, but I have to wonder just "how" they may want to try to differentiate between those with GROLs and any subsequent endorsements - of those who just read a "study guide" enough to pass - from those who have "actual" electronics schooling?

As an examiner for FCC Commercial AND Amateur exams, I've seen many folks come through. You can usually pick out those who know their stuff and those who do not. You can also usually pick out those who DO know the stuff but freeze on exams. For what it is worth - at least in my experience here, most who have "schooling" do NOT usually bring any type of "study guide". I've tested whole groups of School students and not one study guide was to be seen. Same goes for those who are "comfortable" with their knowledge of Ham radio. They simply feel - if they don't know it by test time - then no sense testing. For the GROL, it is an expensive proposition if you don't know your stuff or haven't been able to grasp the study guide material. Back in the day - it was usually the cost of a LONG trip (maybe lodging too) to an FCC office, now they're more local but cost is still there - pass or fail. Come to think of it, if the current rate increases stay the same - soon - the Amateur Exams will cost almost if not as much as the GROL! They're almost half way there now - depending on which VEC/TCM you go through.

Yes, it is going to be very interesting indeed to see how things progress not only in the Amateur Licensing area, but also the "Commercial" side as well - for the next few years at least.

Eh, not really..... I'm "agreeing" with you as to his content. As to mine, I was basically replying to what Brenda Ann had said. He didn't hit a "soft spot". People like that - I just find very ignorant. You're right, it is funny! My exchange with him died with my last contact with him. I'm merely replying to others. AND giving my opinion about people like that. Him get to me? THAT IS FUNNY! I've had better people try. So, in that regard I'll disagree with you. He didn't budge my blood pressure - one iota. So, sorry - he gets no stars. I've just agreed to disagree with him and am agreeing with the others - YOU included (to the point mentioned).

Mensa - who gives a damned? Most of the "brilliant" people I've ever met - had their thumbs up their ass when it came to doing the basic things in life - they can't do them. What the hell good is a "brilliant" person if they're too stupid to know how or lazy to do "basic" things? If having a Mensa number means you're bankrupt in common sense or "lazy", I'd rather not be a member - thank you. Often, it is "common sense" which gets you through - NOT "brilliance". Of course, in your self-righteous response you probably did not consider the possibility that the "Mensa" person was a troll. Makes no difference, does it? He certainly set you off on a rant.
I give him five stars for that.

Sit back, read the post again and view it with a bit of a tongue-in-cheek sense of humor. It will lower your blood pressure. Even if the guy IS a Mensa member, by the simple fact of him bragging about same shows that he is a blowgut braggart whose ego has gotten in the way of common sense.

You've been provided COUNTLESS opportunities to do just that (discuss radio related topics with us) but always choose to either insult and berate those who do try to talk to you like a man, or you make stuff up and it's so obvious that you're lying that no one WANTS

THIS is YOUR "payback" for years of lying, bragging about lying, getting caught lying, and lying about lying.

Now...go right on ahead and tell us about how your lying is sooooooooo beneficial to you and that unborn son of yours that you intend to teach how to lie....

Now...YOU can suck it up, be a man, and stop YOUR attacks not only

Exactly as you are trying to use your Morse code skill to make nocode techs feel inferior to you "real hams". (Incidentally, what good is Morse code skill when one can't even spell "genius"?)

> No one is any better than the rest of us.

Strange words from a man who has been pounding his chest because knowing Morse code makes him so superior.

I agree with the Morse Code (or whatever exotic name it has evolved to in modern day) as still being useful. I think morse code is a lot of fun, and very much a part of the ham hobby's old-time, nostalgic glamour. I see no harm in making it part of a ham's testing and licensing requirement. I feel that it is definitely useful, and provides communicants with an international second language to deal with in emergencies.

I do not think the newer hams are idiots for wanting to do away with code, but I think they are missing out on a piece of irreplaceable history that is so easy to maintain and cherish forever.
Viva le ham.

If I remember correctly, the incident had nothing to do with dumbing down technical issues. It was all about the outdated Morse code testing requirement which a lot of countries have indeed dropped.

Of course not. They are entrance exams, not university degrees.

Exactly! That is their entire purpose. They open the door to a lifetime of learning.

My reporting my MENSA membership is usually a troll aimed at someone who feels himself to be superior to everyone else for some obscure reason, e.g. Morse code skill. Note that not only is a lack of Morse code skill belittled but MENSA membership is also belittled. In fact, any difference from the attitudes and attrubutes of the poster will be belittled.
Even correct definitions of words have been belittled.

Truth is, I got into MENSA because someone lost a bet and paid for my exam and dues. I am not presently a member of MENSA because the yearly dues exceed my threshold of pain.
But I am a member of OOTC and FISTS, #8741. :-)

I don't view testing in this regard as a form of teaching. The goal, as someone posted, is to "get in the door". What's wrong with that?

Memorizing precise answers and not processes is lazy, I guess. However, following ARRL testing manuals, you HAVE to learn the processes.

Deep understanding of all principles involved will gain you an educational degree. That's not the intent of FCC testing.

It's a hobby! Get in the door and have fun.

I am sorry, but do you type with your feet?

Anyway,,
Back in the old days, we used to walk 5 miles in the snow to the FCC field office to take our exams. We had to kneel on radiators while we took the test. We used slide rules and crayons AND WE LIKED IT!!!

Then we'd wait 3 years to receive our license which gave us time to teach electrons to enter and exit all the tubes...stupid little buggers, those.

Boy, those were the days. When a ham was a ham, brass was for pounding and AM signals were as wide as the day is long.

These "young" whippersnappers get off too easy.

I say, rank priveleges on the basis of how big an RF burn you can take,
or on the basis of personal weight.

I may have said it before: take the FCC out of it completely and go with the FDA. Those boys know how to grade.

(Too much tea this morning!)

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 291,209 (43.2%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of August 2, 2006:

Novice - 24,715 (3.8%) [decrease of 24,614]
Technician - 283,467 (43.1%) [increase of 78,073]
Technician Plus - 37,012 (5.6%) [decrease of 91,848]
General - 132,510 (20.2%) [increase of 19,833]
Advanced - 71,381 (10.9%) [decrease of 28,401]
Extra - 108,206 (16.5%) [increase of 29,456]

(percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 320,479 (48.8%) [decrease of 13,775]

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 312,097 (47.4%) [increase of 20,888]

Total all classes - 657,291 (decrease of 17,501)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military, RACES or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

If MENSA membership is important to you, fine. Most of us find it a bit pretentious and downright silly.

If someone wants to use MENSA to elevate themselves above the rest, they are perched on very rickety stilts.

Question (this is not a flame):.

1. Is the ability to decode Morse Code transmissions, in one's own wet modem (brain), at high speed, proportional or even relevant in any possible way to one's ability to pass a mensa test and be accepted for membership? Is mensa membership useful? Is mensa membership a measure of Morse wet modem throughput?

Cecil, I think you already answered all of the above as 'no'. That doesn't mean I like the the brand of motorcycle you drive. I do not. I like BMW's that don't require a toolkit for every 100 miles on the road.

2. Or, (as I suspect), is Morse ability only useful after you have purchased one's HF equipment, now that one has passed the test (whose investment you otherwise would not have made until you passed the trivial but compulsory 5wpm test for Morse code proficiency) to have to have fun and prevent future alien attacks?

I am an extra class op who passed 13 wpm several years ago, can do 25 wpm now and getting better all the time just because of heavy (and fun) Morse action on the cw sub-bands, and wanting to know what people are saying and being able to communicate back; in fact, CW is almost as good as psk31.

3. Just the same, how much does this mensa thing cost? Is it worth a dinner for 4?

Rusty, let me answer you this way. In my humble opinion, a MENSA level IQ is worth magnitudes more to its possessor than is Morse code skill even within the Amateur Radio Service. If all the coded hams with IQ's less than 100 were transformed into nocode techs with MENSA level IQ's, the ARS would be much better off and a lot less prone to silliness. The ARRL might even stop publishing those gross technical errors, e.g. reflections don't exist.

nobody deserves to be called a child molestor not even a real child molestor (those sick folks deserve a long quiet rest and such peace as their misdeeds allow them)

not even you Tom deserve being called a child molestor

RE-READ IT - there were TWO people here in the beginning "splitting hairs" about the use of or perhaps MIS use of the word "memorization. One was leaning towards "memorizing" "ANSWERS" purely to satisfy an exam..... i.e; ABCD..... it isn't quite that simple. On the other hand, the other argument was in the "true" sense of the word - TO MEMORIZE (commit to memory for life).

Let me set something straight. "I" was NOT beating my chest about "CODE". I was only in the argument with regard to the use/misuse of the word "Memorization". "I" think code has its place - but not as it once did. It sure isn't keeping the bands clean by keeping it in place. "I" don't use code - that often. I think also, it "can" be fun to learn for those who may want to try it. Some people may - as has been proven, still - others won't - which also has been proven. THAT IS MY stance on code. As to the "mis"spelling of "genius", hey - what can I say - I'm human, I DO make mistakes. I don't rely on "spell check" techniques - so ..... an error does tend to sneak through from time to time. It doesn't matter one iota to me if you do code or not. "I" surely am not here to pass judgement on you or anyone else by that ability or inability (since some DO have trouble getting it). OR lack of interest "may" be more specific. I have quite a few people I talk to on the bands who are "NO CODE Techs. They're not interested in the code - OR wanting to climb any higher in license class. Its cool with me..... That is their thing - not mine. It sure doesn't mean we can't have a decent conversation - be it on the air via repeater, simplex, computer mode or face to face.

you're trolling, aren't you?

If you truly believe this stuff, you're in sadder shape than I thought.

Your MENSA membership is dreck, dribble, dross. With code, there is, at least, some grounding in practicality: a real world function.

"Whew! I knew I was a genius but now I have PROOF!" How completely sad.

MENSA has perverted the very nature of IQ in a manner not dissimilar to the way Home Owner Associations have perverted the notion of individual freedoms (guaranteed by our Constitution).

Enjoy your little trophy but I'm sure you'll keep yourself insulated from the derision you richly deserve when you bring it up in this newsgroup.

I can tell that you're not a bad guy...but, the mensa thing makes you seem, I don't know, ...(fill in the blank)

Look up the definition of "libel". Part of it is "malicious defamation". Calling a penny a cent isn't malicious, nor is it defamatory.

You need to take your own advice. Also you need to ask an English teacher - you don't seem to know the definitions of a lot of very common words.

Another case of your commenting on something you don't understand.
"The core of the matter" is the difference between rote memorization and understanding - which you don't understand.

There's a difference between "knowledge" as a class and specific knowledge - something evidently outside the scope of your knowledge.

I'm not the one who doesn't understand the discussion, inverting

Again, Webster's is a compendium of common usage, not an unabridged

As soon as the IEEE becomes a body of experts in the usage of the allow Morkie to act as his "agent" in RRAP.

The thought he get's across is that he's incompetent and arrogant.

Dyslexia has nothing to do with it.

There was nothing for you to feel guilty about, Jack. Unless you were a trained speech therapist or other childhood educational clinician, how would you have known?

The fact of the matter is that you probably did her more good than harm. Was it tough on her? No doubt. But that beats coddling her and allowing her to use the "I'm a victim"" escape that so many
"affilicted" persons want to declare today.

The point is that she knows now, can get therapy for it, and is strong enough to know that she can overcome this "problem" through education, training and technology...Not to mention the love and support of her father, of course!

> I was diagnosed as Duslexic and am at a better occasion verbaly of

Your present problem, Mork, has nothing to do with any diagnosed condition.

It has to do with your unwillingness to seek treatment and correction of it.

There are copious fixes available yet you refuse to take advantage of them.

THAT makes you an idiot...NOT "dyslexic".

> > Are you a native North American, or are you an immigrant?

Sigh.

Many immigrants, including most Central Europeans, are the recipients of a mandatory ESL, or "English as a Second Language" programs.

There's no accomodation for idiots, Mork.

You point out that you're better at audio testing, but you simultaneously insist that you can't copy the code aurally.

Depends on what?

How smart mouth and abusive you were on any given day?

Or how willing they were to absorb your abuse and do their best to overcome the codependency you'd developed by coddling from parents who didn't have the intestinal fortitude to tell you "no" when you demanded

Jack, you've just fallen prey to the clutches of Mark C. Morgan, better known in this forum as "Mork Moron"...Or if you'd care to, by his nomme-de-guerre, LtCol Mark C. Morgan of the US Army Chemical Corps.

Or is it Sgt Mark Morgan of the "47th CSB (prov)"...?!?! We can't tell. He admitted to lying about being a field grade officer in the Army as he did about being drafted. Of course it didn't take a degree in astrophysics to figure out that Mork was only SEVEN years old as the last conscriptees in the United States were being mustered OUT, let alone being inducted.

Nor does it take a rocket scientist to see through his current rants about being in a unit that no one can find anywhere. Oh, to be sure there are sound-alike, "almost the same" unit designators, however

Mork (nor anyone else for that matter....) cannot find any reference to his "47th CSB (PROV)" that back up THIS tale. More likely and plausible is the theory that he was a visitor to Ft Sill, OK at one time and saw signs for real units, and then got confused when he started his current round to tale-telling.

Markie's current rant is to try and pummel me over "trampling" the memory of some Army NCO that passed away recently and whom Morkie allegedly knew. Again it is more likely that this was a convienient ruse for Morkie to claim he knew someone in this fictional unit of his, only now the tale can't be verified.

Also, Mork is a great believer in recreational lying. As a matter of fact, some posts made by him within the last couple of days record his stating that his as-of-yet-to-be-born son will be thoroughly trained in lying and encouraged to do so often.

Please...Don't take my word for it. Please take the time to research some of Morkie's posts in this forum. They are nothing if not a window into the mind of a very, VERY sick man. But be prepared to have to do some amateur-detective work to find them all...To date Morkie's posted under no fewer than 26 different "nics", or screen names, that I have kept track of...I am sure there are more.

Good luck.

(HUGE SNIP)

Mork, YOU have GROSSLY DIShonored both yourself and members of the United States Armed Forces with your pathetic lies...first about being a field grade officer, then about being an Enlisted man. Don't you DARE presume to talk about Honor in uniform, little boy! You're just not up to the task!

And Lennie has dishonored himself with HIS pathetic attempts to "glorify" his newsgroup postings with his lame references to having served in a communications batallion that had KIA's in Korea in such a way as to make it appear as though he was somehow part-and-parcel of the sacrifices those brave men made.

And then we have Lennie's "Incomming Artillery" story...what a hoot!~

The only difference between you and Lennie is that Lennie has provided SOME proof that HIS service was legitimate...It's just too bad he tarnished it with that disgusting end-run for the sake of pathetic newsgroup messaging points...

MARS to Assist TSA "When All Else Fails"

Amateur Radio operators who are members of the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS) will provide back-up communication for the US Transportation Security Administration (TSA) under a formal agreement announced in July by Army MARS Chief Kathy Harrison, AAA9A. Protecting airports during the hurricane season will be the immediate focus, she said, adding that the new MARS-TSA collaboration "is likely to expand to other Department of Homeland Security (DHS) areas" in the future.

"This is an extensive area and will require member support across the continental United States," Harrison said in a broadcast announcement to Army MARS participants. "We will need many volunteers to man teams assigned to specific geographical areas, starting with airports throughout the hurricane corridor." She called for "physically capable" Amateur Radio operators to volunteer for the assignment.

The first airport emergency support teams will be located at four airports in the Florida hurricane belt: Miami, Ft Myers, Jacksonville and Pensacola, Harrison said. She added that recruiting will immediately follow for nine additional potential hurricane targets from Washington, DC to Houston. In a later phase -- but as soon as possible -- additional teams will be recruited for other hurricane locations including Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and after that, the remainder of the continental US.

The emergency support teams -- each consisting of four members of MARS -- are being assembled under joint sponsorship of MARS and the TSA, with deployment assignments determined by the TSA when and if the government's communication systems fail. "Volunteers should be within a reasonable traveling distance to the airport. It will be their responsibility to get to the site when activated," said Harrison.

The Memorandum of Understanding, which is already in place, calls for using MARS networks, personnel and equipment to maintain communication during the first 72 hours of incidents involving aircraft, mass transit and pipelines. Seventy-two hours is considered the maximum time needed for federal response organizations to deploy internal emergency communication systems.

The MoU spells out the most extensive MARS support mission since the development of the Essential Elements of Information (EEI), which date to the 1994 Northridge earthquake that devastated parts of California's San Fernando Valley. EEIs are alerts to the Pentagon of a natural disaster or other incident that might require a federal response.

In a memo to MARS personnel, Harrison included the following points:

The Navy-Marine Corps and Air Force MARS organizations are included in the call for volunteers, via their separate chains of command.

Army MARS state directors will be responsible for formation of the joint teams.

All deployments will be by team, each with a combination of equipment and operator capabilities and members ready to work 12-hour shifts. Some locations may ultimately require more than one team.

Required equipment for each team will include HF and VHF radios with voice and digital capability, Pactor/Airmail digital messaging, phone patching and emergency power.

Some locations may have TSA radio gear and emergency power supply to augment the hams' personal equipment.
A particular MARS responsibility will be to provide communication interoperability with local, state and national networks, such as the Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service (RACES) and Shared Resources (SHARES). A separate web of national and regional HF radio networks, SHARES links federal agencies under the DHS's National Communications System (NCS), of which MARS already is a primary participant.

The pact calls for a reliable back-up solution "to ensure the continuity of TSA's command and control function during the first 72 hours following any incident interfering with normal communications channels and to provide local, regional and nationwide TSA communications during that time." The existing Army MARS emergency communication network offers such a solution immediately and at no additional cost to the TSA, the MoU points out.

Under the MoU, the TSA agrees to provide MARS volunteers with access to its facilities and space for radio equipment. It further agrees to integrate MARS capabilities into its emergency planning and exercises. The Army's commitment includes providing "volunteer MARS radio operators, equipment, and use of the MARS radio networks" and developing "alert procedures and a communications support plan" that "will identify specific frequencies, call signs, and radio operator level duties." Harrison stressed that the decision to volunteer rests with the individual. "The Army has no liability over a member who reports to a disaster site; members will be responsible to TSA personnel."

Harrison told the Army MARS membership that she's "very excited" about the new agreement. "This will be a fast-moving recruitment/development action, and I request your support in filling these teams."

The chiefs of Air Force and Navy-Marine Corps MARS also are onboard with the new agreement and have messaged their respective memberships to signify their participation and cooperation with Army MARS. Air Force MARS Chief Don Poquette, AGA3C/KE9XB, has pledged his members' support. "AF MARS will assist to accomplish this mission," he said, pending working out logistical details.

Harrison says she and her headquarters staff met recently with TSA and DHS representatives to formalize the details of the cooperative arrangement. She said MARS area coordinators will provide specific requirements to state MARS directors to recruit members and equipment capabilities to support TSA.

Signing the MoU on behalf of the Army was Col Mary Beth Shively, chief of staff, Network Enterprise Technology Command/Ninth Army Signal Command. James Schear, general Manager, Operational Plans and Programs, endorsed it for the TSA. Headquartered at Ft Huachuca, Arizona, the Ninth Army Signal Command oversees the Army MARS mission. -- Bill Sexton, N1IN

"ARES, MARS and RACES are passe" N0IMD

"So many ARES memebers are over committed that none of them will be effective" N0IMD

Each one of these statements has been made by you at one time or another since 1999. And each one has been proven FALSE multiple times.

Brian, YOU are the WATER BOY for idiotic claims in THIS forum when it comes to Amateur Radio, following right behind Lennie the Licenseless and Mork Moron ! ! ! ! !

Brian P Burke, N0IMD, effortlessly continues to hold his Feeble Five seat.

They are all entry level. The Extra class license allows entry into the Extra class frequency segments. An amateur license is not a status symbol. Its only worth is the privileges granted. In the 1950's, generals, conditionals, advanced, and extras all had the same frequency privileges.
I would like to see one amateur license granting all amateur privileges so this crazy irrational pecking order nonsense would cease.

you are worng it becoming hazing when the subject of the test is unrelated to the prevlegdes it grannts like testing for Guases law for the Post office so is morse code testing for the ARS

I would certainly be able to pass it your effort to smeear anybody that disagrees with you not withstanding or indeed if you succeeded in producing a test I could not pass you would exclude a lot of people besides me and kill the ARS which seems to be your objecctive wether you know it or not further if you produced a test that some woth an MS in GeoPhysics

as it happens I did not

I ordereda copy of the tech mnaul but it did not arive before the test so I took it and passed based on what was in my headabout rf and working the rules question mostly from the notion just which of these

Their not bogus station steve, I have recieved a number of request via regular mail for QSL Cards, the station IS on the air 24/7 and I have had people from as far away as Canada hear it running a power output of 50 to 100 watts

Foolishness?? in what way steve, I mearly announced the station was on the air so people can hear it...their's no law against that. As a matter of fact those people that had mail me for QSL request heard about the station on here or the Free Radio Network. The only foolishness on here is your stupidity

There nothing illegal about it steve, I own a high max ultralight. Hi Max can be made into ultralight. Despite what YOU might think, And No, I've moved that aside for my education I'm hoping to get back ito it next year steve, thanks for your concern.

Citing it and understanding it is too different things steve. Beside my radio station isn't under Part 97, it's under Part 15. Maybe you should leave Law to someone who know it and don't put their personal opinions into it claim it's Law Steve.

If you want steve, I'll be happy to scan the QSL card request into my computer and post them on my blog. There is also a podcast http://www.piratearchive.net/pirateweek/pw080606.mp3 which has part of my transmission on it and he does metion my name and callsign. If you want more proof then that steve well, that's all I can give you right now.

Not true Steve, the station IS legal and you and the FCC is more then welcome to come check the field strength at 30 meter (98/99 feet) from the antenna and you will see I'm in compliance with part 15

I find it amusing so many want to deny the very existance of this unit why is that?

after none of the cites prove I was there
of course it more than steve has done for his service but then twices
nothing is still nothing

That's not a sig line, it's part of your post. Sigs appear UNDER the tear (and you don't even have a tear). Put your sig in the signature area, not as part of your post. (If you can figure out how to use Agent.)

Like it was "killed" all through the 30s, 40s, 50, 60s, etc.? Code was required, as was drawing schematics. Yet there were more hams every year than there were the year before. You have a strange

My statement if you enacted a standard that would in fact keep me from passing, that would kill the ARS. That sort would require far more than merely adding schamtics or going to short answer questions. it would involved a test that would serious chalange Cecil and Len Anderson both RF engineers, doing that would kill the ars as would the

As far as I know, there is no governmental PhD class license and therefore no governmental ranks of those with PhDs.

You don't seem to know much about 1950's ham licenses.
You didn't know that Conditional was a General exam taken by mail. You don't know there were many Advanced class hams in the 1950's faithfully renewing their licenses. My Elmer was an Advanced licensee. Here's a quote from a 1957 ARRL License Manual: "Holders of Advanced Class licenses may renew them so long as they can comply with renewal requirements."

Plenty of value to those who have to work with oscillators of various types. It's difficult to design a circuit when you have no understanding of it.

Klein, you said you were an OF. Any olde-fahrt ought to KNOW that silver-mica capacitors were color-dot-coded for about a quarter century. [look in the 1976 ARRL Handbook] Those flat cases were eventually displaced by dipped silver-mica.

Paper tubular capacitors in molded plastic tubular casings were marked with color bands and were on the market for at least 15 years, maybe 20...until aced out by ceramic disc capacitors for general bypassing and coupling applications (by both tube and transistor architecture electronics).

ANYONE with hands-on experience in electronics between 1950 and about 1970 would KNOW that. [okay, folks, looks like there's another imposter here...at least this one isn't trying to pass hisself off as some marine NCO...:-)

You are still using crayons but I doubt you know how to use a 1950 slide-rule...too complex for brass-pounders.

Oh, and FCC Field Offices were NOT 10 miles apart in the USA now, in 1956 (when I took a train 80 miles into Chicago), nor before then.

>Then we'd wait 3 years to receive our license which gave us time to

Wrongo, olde-fahrt. Electrons, fields, and waves will ONLY obey THEIR rules. You can't "teach" them anything. All you can do is provide paths for them...on THEIR terms.

>Boy, those were the days. When a ham was a ham, brass was for pounding

That was well before 1960...like before WW2.

>These "young" whippersnappers get off too easy.

Pizza off, olde-fahrt. 51 years ago I would be walking a mile from a corner of an airfield NE of Tokyo to the transmitter house in the center which housed 41 HF transmitters ranging in power output from 1 KW to 40 KW. Not a single one of them used manual (morse code) radiotelegraphy modes. About two square miles of wire antennas doing 24/7 radio circuit transmission to CONUS, Hawaii, Phillippines, Okinawa, Korea, and a MAG in Vietnam. Six of those circuits used multichannel SSB (the commercial variety, like in-use prior to WW2).

I STARTED that HF transmitter site work in '53, NO military schooling on kilowatt transmitters, RTTY, or SSB and NO
"CW" skill necessary.

>I say, rank priveleges on the basis of how big an RF burn you can take,
>or on the basis of personal weight.

Sounds like you had TOO MANY of those "RF burns."

See Dr. Robeson in here...he will bandage your "burns" with one of his medical-practice certificates...those are sterile.

>I may have said it before: take the FCC out of it completely and go with >the FDA. Those boys know how to grade.

"Ham is the butchered meat of swine?"

Last guy I heard utter that phrase is SK...used to work with him
(he was a code-tested Extra)...he came out with that every once in a while when some amateur morseman got too full of himself.

>(Too much tea this morning!)

If MORSEMANSHIP is important to you, fine. Most of US find it a bit pretentious and downright silly.

If someone wants to use MORSEMANSHIP to elevate themselves above the rest, they are perched on very rickety stilts.

[I'll just add something like...]:

Stilts are needed by morsemen because their appearance, relative to REAL radio people, are very short. They try to gain "height" of their reputation by using 1930s standards in the year 2006.
Tsk, they don't realize that their new "height" still falls short of everyone else...

So we have to give everyone a driver's license, even those who can't drive? And let everyone vote, even those who are mentally incompetent? No discrimination based on anything?

The Constitution doesn't prevent us from imposing standards, Markie. And the law certainly doesn't guarantee that we're all equal, only that we all be given equal opportunity to EARN what we want. There's no Constitutional guarantee that the government will give us everything we want, or that it can't treat different people in accordance with those differences.

gee I got an an A in My HS physics class and for that matter a B in my course physics course on E&M theory I certainly am quailified again BTW you imply I cheated or somehow did not earn mine I did did I have to work as hard as you maybe not but then I don't think You should have had to work as hard as you did I regret I can' change that for you but the I did so you must BS is not going to carry on if I can help it lets not you want to tkaet the same notion into Radio why not hold pilots to same sort of stanards as Radio Ops after flying is a bit more dangerous

no becuase driving is dangerous peotcaily ham radio is not furtehr what evidence do you advance that Higher make beter radio ops

indeed you reject the notion that higher IQ means much of anything
> And let everyone vote, even those who are mentally most esp we should not restrict the mentaly imcpomtant form from voting since the likely result in time is everyone being declared so > No discrimination based on anything?

not on something un related to the matter being regulated

Morse Code was never vital for Hams to be operate once we had voice we could have done away with such testing (aprt from the treaty) the requirement for Morse being to avoid the military on cw would have meant a voice that could read code would simply have to qsy everytime
he heard CW)

today theere is NO requirement for CW testing. It is not needed that I know CW in order to operate at all. Indeed even if we don't stick to band plans I don't need to be able read a CW signal to know it is there, and reconize the frequency is in use

since I gave you no leave to address me familier

and that anything in our way must relate to matter being regulated

no harm will result if I don't know Morse code many hams ven now on HF don't know it well enough to use indeed there was never a test to determine if we could use it on the air at all

I expect the Govt not to require mye to demstrate a skill that is completely uneeded in order to access public airwaves

the FCC (and I et al) have regrected as false all the arguements that Code testing makes one a better operator

you have advanced no real reason why I need to know without looking ti up whattype of occiclator a given circut is you adavnce no answer to how we would insure that the tests you want

UNTIL the Code requirement is abolished for good - which to my recollection - it has not for U.S. hams (yet), then to get on H.F. you most certainly are required to pass the 5 WPM code exam.

> no harm will result if I don't know Morse code many hams ven now on HF

Also, I think if you read Part 97 - you may be surprised. VEs can give either a receiving test OR "sending" test. USUALLY (most of the time) - it is a "receiving" test. Whatever it takes for them to have "the examinee" prove his/her knowledge of the code at 5 WPM. For example, you could claim tone deafness to me - ok - so instead of "receiving" the code, I could have you "send" the code. Before the code dropped to 5 WPM - you could get a doctor to sign a waiver and you got code credit. BUT once the code was dropped, so too were the waivers. I know it may sound hokey to have you "send" code if you claim tone deafness, but the other options are a buzzer sending YOU the code - you decipher - or a flashing light or whatever. AND the FCC stated to the VEs that THOSE claiming handicaps are the ones responsible for supplying the equipment to enable them to have every reasonable chance of passing. Also, that code test "could" be broken down into segments. Instead of playing a tape with a full message as you would to most applicants, the VEs could break it down in segments of letters, words, sentences at a time for someone with severe handicaps. WHATEVER was able to give that applicant every reasonable chance of passing without much stress.
Argue that with THEM - "I" didn't make the rules.

So, just when was it that CODE was "abolished" as an "Exam" requirement?
Maybe I missed some mail from the VECs and FCC to tell me to quit testing for 5 WPM code to get on H.F. ..... You give me a date that it went into effect, and I'll retract my post.....

OK, I'll buy that - but again, until the code {exam} is "ABOLISHED" - we are "required" to have it for H.F. I WILL agree, once many pass their code exams, they never see a key or listen to a code tape - again...........

For what it is worth and THIS I've not kept up with - I have heard that there is a move afoot - by the FCC themselves - to abolish the code requirement. For some strange reason, September or October of this year comes to mind. I guess we'll have to wait and see.

what ever has happened to Hams
I First wrote a couple of week I stil basicaly stand by it. I have made at leaest a few contacts most likely before the jammer/bootlegger came on I beleive if I find I can't confrim any of them I am confident that my gear will do EME (in an effort ot work split I did "hear" echo of another qso meaning I can rea dhte largest stations and surley based on the eme literure I can make an eme contact even through such interference I ham seting up a sked to wrok in split mode with neither frq known to other till later in an effort to asure myself I have done what I set out to do

In response to my claim of my first EME contact someone in RRAP came back with "I doubt you can caluate the pathloos on an EME path (or words to that effect)

You know what I can't calualte that path loss

Indeed I would discourage anyone from trying to calculate it before trying the path what I have heard about those numbers is pretty discouraging

Why can I make such a contact when other say they can't or that I can't?

simple becuase I always KNEW I would, from the first monet I heard of EME contact which was from a question on Tech test back in 97 (I had heard a few days ebfore that No Code License existed I ordered the study but it arrived only the VE session so I tired the test cold KNOWING I would pass it then or next week or..) at the monent knowing nothing more than that such a contact was possible with my license I swore I would make one (or more)

I read the about the mode in detail and soon (in 97) realize I would likely have to wait awhile to keep that vow, but from time to time I renewed my efforts at first in data gathering a new milestone 2004 when I heard about the results with JT modes I began to pracetice with the early ones in terestial contact then last winter I learn of current jt65b mode and the details of the power and anttenna requiement abit of agonizing over wether I wanted to work with crushcrafts 31 foot 17b2 that I KNEW would work but that I have trouble steer or keeping safe in our harsh winters or the 13b2 I thought might work (and it did work like a charm, which it is in some sense of course) figuring I could always use it in terrestial modes and that I could later phase it with a second one and be assured of sucess then

but ALWAYS in mind was the KNOWLEDGE and assurance that I WOULD suceed and that even if I had failed now it was merely a lesson learned , part of paying my dues as it were

I knew I would one day be able to do it

I know anybody reading reading these words can do EME if they poccess 2 things

the will to reach for the Moon
the confindence to not count the obstacles

You have MY call on it KB9RQZ (sone to be /AE)

if you can't the data drop me a comment here or Deadly Force Michigan and me Amusing the way those that claim I am a nonenity are always trying to advance the notion I am not allowed to defend myself with deadly force

one can read it in the link but the readers degist abridged version amounts that wether or not the Castle doctrines apllies in a given (recent impending changes expand the castle doctrne in Michigan BTW http://www.migunowners.org/forum/showthread.php?t=15323) acitizen who is not the agressor is only required to retreat from a dangerous sitution in event he SAFELY do so. I point out in RRAP RRCB that I am able to walk easily and thus I would argue if one of these nuts jobs forced me to by getting himself shoot on my land that my ability to safely retreat is seriously limited if it exists at all, and second the threshold to cause me bodilyharm is lower than most becuase of the same health problems

in short since I have been forced to think i conclude that If come accroos a vandal on my land barring his imediate flight I will quickly exaust any option I have not to use force esp deadly force should it be at my disposal (after all I can't put ma shotgun if since he can better move to take and use it against and I can't enage in hand to hand combat to restrain the Vandal without serious risks to both of us)

some notes on obselete tech on radio but you have to wait for it why did the Longbow cease to be the main stay of the battle feild?
after the crossbow that replaced was an inferior weapon and the crossboww superior to the muskets and rifles that replaced indeed the english longbowmen was more effective on the battlefeild than any military system the follow till after WW2 indeed a gruop Bowmen out of other ammo but happening to have thier bow with in the retreat toward Dunkirk put a german unit to flight (mostly through the shock factor and the quieness of the bow)
why did the longbow lose control of the battlefiled simple it took a lifetime of traning and practice to maintain that effectness a crowbowmen could be trained in months
a riflemen in weeks
finaly to radio
why did CW lose out to mode that are effective

acodring to even it booster is takes weeks to train a cw ops and it take practice for most to keep up their skill voivce why these day even the porblem for voice op in geting through signal problem is practiced by cell phones users in many locals on a daily basis
CW was too expensive in human and finacail terms to surviv in the comercail world
it is too expensive in huan terms to hold sway with more than half of the ARS ops now (look at the numers) andyet it boosters inist like the King of englad did at one point in trying to ban the playing of golf to insist on it continued infliction on the ARS yet it is likely as the longbow does survive being superceeded by the crossbow musket and M16 that it will survive but could drop the crap about it being the end of the ars to change in the tech of the late 20th century and stop decring those that would like to play as trators to the kingdom of the ARS

SEARCH = /MARQUEER/>>>>>>>>RESULTS::::::::::::::::::::

1. Someone who sucks a man's penis.
2. A very stupid person.

1. Because I saw Marqueer suck DrDeath's penis I knew that Marqueer is a cocksucker.
2. That fucking DrDeath cocksucker gave Marqueer money for a head job.

MARQUEER is predictably unreliable and will fuck up whatever he is attempting to do--especially while doing something for another person.

That cocksucker Marqueer couldn't drive five miles without getting lost.

MARQUEER is in this order:

1:A person that makes your life as hard as possible.
2:A person that will stand in your way, and mess anything up you do.
3:A person that only cares for them self, and no one else!
4:A person that is looking to give one trouble.

Marqueer is a real Cocksucker.

Marqueer performs or has performed fellatio on dogs.

Marqueer was a cocksucker.

Hey Marqueer,Fuck off you worthless cocksucker!

Marqueer gives head.
Marqueer enjoys Giving blowjobs to niggers.

MARQUEER; Also see homo- fag- faggot- shiteating- cocksucking- queen

Ex: 1, Dude I saw Marqueer suck DrDeath's cock.
2, FUCK YOU YOU MARQUEER COCKSUCKER

1.MARQUEER performs fellatio on DrDeath.

2. MARQUEER licked and sucked DrDeath's cock until DrDeath nearly

The reason you can't find an "exact match" for your "unit is that it never existed.

You saw various combinations of unit designators, made something up, and then ran with it. The problem (for you) is that you've now made it unerringly clear that YOU are LYING about THIS military service just like your "Army Chemical Corps" rant of the late 90's.

You can keep posting, re-posting and re-backediting all the posts you want to, Morkie, but you've been "outted" on THIS lie just like every other one you've told.

Stop lying, Morkie...You're not very good at it.

wrong again

the reason you canan't find an exact match in found in the namme itself it contained the word "Provisional" meaning that while whle we all called the unit that at Ft Sill it was not yet the oiffical name in DC

if Steve knew much about the military he would know that he also would not have made up the lie that the 214th brigade did not exist

the crossposting fo thread has been the stock in trade of you and your allies in harrasmsent libel and id theft for years

I rarely add a NG but there is no reason for me to sclip em back

unlike you Robeson I have braoder interest than just this NG

you are adivised to cease and desist your libel slander harassment copyright violations and behave yolike at least mere children

if you want to have people to tlak to in here Robeson you about have to do this as basicaly nobody will converse withyou on the NG which as you should noticed is not the case for me

you have other options you can try of course

"They're"

Sure they are. Do you have a broadcast license?

I know you need once since your station is undoubtedly running more than Part 15 limits.

Punctuation, Collegeboy.

How are they going to hear it if it's running Part 15 limits
unless they live within a mile of you, Toiddie?

No...YOUR stupidity.

I doubt anyone heard anything you put on the air, Toiddie.

There's no convern, Toiddie, except you you illegally modifying an ultralight as per Part 103.

And yes, Toiddie...A 10 gallon fuel tank on an ultralight IS illegal.

Part 103 of the FAR's refers.

"...is twe different things..."

Just like your use of English words and the CORRECT use of English words, Toiddie.

I understand them perfectly well.

There is NO exception to the use of your HiMax as an ultralight under Part 103 as you have modified it.

I didn't mention Part 97 ANYWHERE in these exchages vis-a-vis your current "broadcast station", Toiddie.

See...Your English USE and English COMPREHENSION are NOT one in the same!

Sorry, Morkie...As it pertains to me, that is a blatant lie.

> I rarely add a NG but there is no reason for me to sclip em back

Yes you do ROUTINELY add newsgroups to threads and there is EVERY good reason for you to "sclip" them back...Because when you don't, you expose your follishness to an even larger audience.

In other words, even more and more folks become aware of just what an idiot you really are.

> unlike you Robeson I have braoder interest than just this NG

No...You have an interest in trying to gather sympathy for your plight.

Problem is that your "plight" is being stupid, and there's no fixing that.

> you are adivised to cease and desist your libel slander harassment > copyright violations and behave yolike at least mere children

You are "adivised" to seek the services of a reputable second grade English Composition tutor, seek a lawyer to help you sue your parents for letting you "graduate" with a substandard education, and get a vasectomy before you can procreate children that will be as substandard as you.

Talking ABOUT you and talking TO youa re TWO DIFFERENT ANIMALS, Fatboy!

And as for haivng people to talk TO:

(A) My logbook fills up nicely, thank-you and...

(B) You should read the past 6 months of "CQ" Magazine more carefully...Also keep your eyes open in upcoming months of "Popular Communications".

Steve the Electrical Field emission for 13 Mhz is 15,484 uV/m @ 30 Meters. Omega One Radio is running a power output 100 watts, and the electrical field emission a 17.5 meters is 2,000 uV. At 30 Meters the field emissions is 0 uV You Also have to remeber that 13 MHz is the 22 meter Shortwave Band, which does skip. It it possible to hear part 15 stations on that frequency. You can put out a higher power and produce the required electrical field.

A back of the envelope calculation says you are way over the legal field strength if you're running 100 watts. You can calculate the power it takes for an isotropic radiator to produce a field strength of 15,484E-6 volts/meter as follows:

1. The area of a sphere of radius r is 4*Pi*r^2. An isotropic radiator emitting P watts at the center of the sphere will produce a power density of Pd = P / (4*Pi*r^2) on its surface.

2. The power density is related to the electric field and the impedance of free space (120*Pi) by the formula Pd = e^2 / (120*Pi).

3. Solving (1) and (2) for the power, P, you come up with P = (er)^2 / 30.

So, for an "e" of 15,484E-6 and an "r" of 30, P = 0.00719 watts, or roughly seven milliwatts.

Since antennas are not isotropic, the power must be reduced even further so that the electric field will not exceed the legal limit in the direction of highest antenna gain.

This calculation ignores line losses and final amplifier inefficiencies, but there's no way in Glendale you can convince me that you can take a 100 watt transmitter and manage to lose so much power that you have seven milliwatts or less being radiated.

All my DeVry Correspondence School instincts tell me that you are seriously in violation of the law. Other DeVry grads at the FCC will immediately agree, as will our distinguished alumnus, KC8JBO, the only man to have discovered negative VSWR.

Be careful, Todd, and rethink your current station configuration.

That's because he realizes that he's been outted and he hopes to Ran into a certain well known cheap-assed ham radio bastard operator today. Everyone in the local clubs know him. He stinks, has greasy hair, bathes monthly (?) and is known to crash ham widow's estate sales the day after they plant the SK. In short the guy is a true F-N low life pig. (...you prolly already know just whom I am speaking of eh...? grin) Drives a beat up old car with 10 antennas on it.

Today I caught this bastard ham stinkball rooting thru the battery recycle boxes at the local office supply store.
He dug out two Dell laptop batteries and quickly shoved them into his dirty overalls pockets he was wearing. (The store is staffed by college age kids who don't give a s--t anyway
so they let him clean out the recycle bins of batteries, toner cartridges, old cellphones and other similar stuff as it's less work for them.....good point I guess.)

Apparently this guy has already hit every recycle bin where ever he could get away with it, and is hoping to claim all these dead Dell batteries as his own on their recent Laptop Battery Recall Program that's been in the news of late. Then when he gets the replacement units he plans to re-sell them at a profit online. Talk about a cheap opportunistic scrounging bum! Only a smelly ex-hamfest bum who used to sell crap at hamfests
and now scams people on e-Bay could think of something like this....

I don't know about any Dell recall, but I routinely go through the recycled battery boxes when I see them. I often get NimH batteries which after being reconditioned (discharged/recharged) a few times are perfectly good.

Source record: 156321

Read this message until the end, and you will find out how the money flows in easy !!!!.
Follow the steps and it WILL work. Trust me !!!!!.

It's NOT illegal and it is NOT a scam !!!!!.

PROVEN ON OPRAH! Reported in the Wall Street Journal!!!!

The only thing you need is : - E-MAIL ACCOUNT
- PREMIER (FREE) or BUSINESS PAYPAL ACCOUNT
- $6 on this account (The only investment)
- 30 minutes of your time

There is no limit on how much money you can recieve, and you haven't got anything to lose with this Business program. I will explain how it works !!!!!.

Follow these 4 easy steps and it WILL work !!!!!.

STEP 1 : SIGN UP FOR A FREE PAYPAL ACCOUNT !!!!!.

Paypal is a free and safe way to pay and receive money on the Internet.
Creating a account is as easy as creating a MSN account.
Copy and paste the next line in your Internet browser and sign up.
HTTP://WWW.PAYPAL.COM

Be sure to sign up for a FREE Premier or Business account and not for a Personal account. You cannot receive CREDITCARD payments with a Personal account and we can't have that. Do we !!!!!.

STEP 2 : SENT $6 TO YOUR PAYPAL ACCOUNT

This is your only investment to receive the money with ease.

With your Paypal account, send $1 to each e-mailadres listed below.
!!!!! IMPORTANT !!!!! Be sure to use this SUBJECT : PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR EMAIL LIST when you send the money.

1) martine@pilote.net
2) dexxatol@netcourrier.com
3) armygirl8568@hotmail.com
4) comjii@starband.net
5) sinnek@bellsouth.net
6) nsi@nelasat.com

STEP 3 : PUT YOUR E-MAIL ADDRESS ON THE BOTTOM OF THE LIST

After you have send $1 to each e-mail address, put your e-mail address on the 6th place.
Remove e-mail address number 1, and move each e-mail address 1 step up the ladder.
!!!!! IMPORTANT !!!!! BE SURE THAT THE E-MAIL ADDRESS YOU USE IS THE SAME AS YOU USED TO SIGN UP AT PAYPAL.

Remember that this is LEGAL. You are creating a service : an e-mail servicelist.

STEP 4 : UPLOAD OR COPY THIS MESSAGE TO NEWSGROUPS, FORUMS ETC AND EMAIL IT TO ALL YOUR FRIENDS!

There are 32,000 newsgroups. Upload or copy this message to at least 200 newsgroups or forums etc, but ..... remember that the more your upload the more people will see your message and the MORE MONEY WILL FLOW IN.

How to upload to newsgroups and forums? :

After you have followed step 1,2,3 and 4, save this message (and copy so you can use it again).
Use your Internet browser and Outlook Express or another newsreader and try to find FORUMS, NEWSGROUPS, BULLETIN BOARDS, DISCUSSION GROUPS, CHAT SITES and ONLINE COMMUNITIES. Use GOOGLE or use a NEWSERVER.
Use every option to post this message. Download PostXpert to send 1 message to more NEWSGROUPS at the same time.

!!!!! REMEMBER !!!!! The more you post this message the more MONEY WILL FLOW IN.

Why does this Business program work so well !!!!!.

Lets asume that from the 200 (or more) messages that you have posted, only 5 people respond, you will have your $6 back that you have invested. Those 5 people will each send at least 200 messages with your e-mailadres on number 4. That's 6 x 6 x $1 = $36. The next 25 people will also send 200 messages with your adres on number 3. That's 36 x 6 x $1 = $216. The next 216 people also send 200 messages with your name on number 2. That's 216 x 6 x $1 = $1296!. Those 1296 people again also send 200 messages with your name on number 1. That will give us a total of 1296 x 6 x $1 = $7,776.

Now the last tier! 7776 x 6 x $1 = $46,656!!!!!!

This is only a EXAMPLE with 6 reactions. You WILL get MORE responses than that.

Remember that most newsservers will leave the posted messages on there servers for about 2 weeks. If you will post your message again, it WILL again start from the beginning. So you can repeat this over and over again.

Everyday MILLIONS of people are ONLINE and reading these messages, JUST LIKE YOU RIGHT NOW. I also was sceptical in the beginning and have read a lot of these messages. I also thought that it was bullshit.
Until I thought : What the hell!, only $6. What's $6 and a couple of minutes of my time to solve my money problems.

!!!!! REMEMBER !!!!! Follow every step, and IT WILL WORK, TRUST ME. !!!!!

!!!!! BEST WISHES AND GOOD LUCK !!!!!

Anyone going to visit the FCC website please leave them these ideas in their comment box, Thanks.

1-No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

2-The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

3-Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

4-Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Aphorisms are statements of truth, however brief or terse. Do you consider truth a negative attribute?

With 100 watts output and single sideband, it would be

Speaking of moronic, how come you told us almost 2 years ago you were "graduating" but now you tell us you haven't?

And even more moronic is your frequent posts that expose your even MORE moronic and pathetic life wherein you set up make believe broadcast stations and play disc jockey to a non-existant audience.

Yes, it is...The aircraft cannot be CONFIGURED to carry more than 5 gallons of fuel, Toiddieboy.

That ruse has been tried by many others. The FAA says that haivng a fuel tank in excess of 5 gallons is prima facie evidence of non-compliance.

That's the same standard that the FCC uses to declare that simly
HAVING a linear amplifier for 11 meters, even if it's not presently connected, is evidence of non-compliance.

Don't beleive me?

Ask the Department of Justice.

I do.

That's why in over 33 years as a licensed Amateur and 31 years as a licensed Aviator I've never had so much as a warning, let alone a citation...I stay legal.

No, it doesn't.

Haivng a 10 gallon fuel tank on an ultralight is illegal.

Period.

Now that I know you've got 100 watts output, I'd have to be crazy to think no one could hear you, Toiddie, unless you were running that into a buried dummyload.

The guy who got you kicked off, or YOU for providing the evidence that you were NOT in compliance with your Terms of Service...?!?!

No ISP is going to boot you unless the evidence is conclusive.
They certainly don't want to get sued for such an act, and they only do such things when there's overwhelming proof.

Speaking of appliances, ToiddieBoy, you were throwing that term around here over a year ago, and when tasked to describe the line-up at N9OGL, all you had was excuses.

I have no doubt in my mind that other than PL-259's and the occassional battery connector or panel light, there's not one single scratch built radio in your house...At least not one built by YOU!

More inadequate use of the language there, ToiddieBoy, but now that we have your admission that your broadcast station on 22 meters is running 100 watts output, maybe we'll drop Mr H a note.

What Part 15 radio stations, ToiddieBoy?

You've admitted right here that you're running 100 watts.

You're illegal, ToiddieBoy...Just like I said you were...

: Dumbfuck, the Marshall County ARES doesn't have a webpage, try again,

Then what is at http://www.geocities.com/skywarncanwarn/ doodle brain?
It sure looks like the Marshall County ARES, and it even has a place to send email.

"Fuckup Shemale Lee" <S...@houston-hunks.com> whined like a fucking spoiled little girl (which he is) in <3brnq721213nsld2n...@houston-hunks.com>:
" I dare you to..."

Fuckup Lee will have his hypocrisy pointed out to him again the next time he posts my quotes in <aimrjv$l8...@pita.alt.net>:
"Didn't I say that your quoting of message IDs is pointless?"

Faggot Lee posts the following slobber, not realizing his own whining and netKKKoping past in <3C8BA6A5.19219...@houston-hunks.com>:
"You don't like it? I suggest that you use your OE news filters, or simply skip the thread. No one is forcing you to read it, and you sure as hell aren't going to get any of the participants to stop."

Faggot Lee admits he and the other anonymous cowards being owned by AB8MQ in <3C93E88F.932B5...@houston-hunks.com>:
"Wiseman (who, by the way, "owns" us)"

Faggot Lee <S...@houston-hunks.com> confirms his SPANKARD status with the following whine but the BITCH still follows up like a good puppy dog in <a9c75d$go...@dosa.alt.net >:
"Basically, Wiseman bores me now, and I won't waste time on his replies [blah blah blah]"

AIDS INFECTED BABY RAPER "Fuckup Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com>
proud of his illiteracy states the obvious in message <986143249...@huffs-on-houston-dicks.com>:
"I normally don't read"

Faggot Stagger Lee confesses he and his family get this way when the prospect of licking testicles (something he doesn't have) is made available in < 12417$Y17.5...@houston-hunks.com>:
"We are overjoyed."

Fuckwit Lee finally admits his SPANK at AB8MQ's hands yet another time in 3C4AE592.6A0CD...@houston-hunks.com:
"[Any followups by Wiseman will be ignored.]"

Fuckup Lee, who fails to "grasp" the concept that "slander" is spoken and "libel" is written, would be better served if he just stuck to grasping nutsacks, incoherently babbled in <3C4AE592.6A0CD...@houston-hunks.com>:

"COTSE seemed to have the laughable notion that what Wiseman was doing was exercising freedom of speech. Slander is of course not protected speech in the US, but the concept that even free speech has its limits seemed to be impossible for Steve Gielda -- COTSE's owner -- to grasp."

Chickenshit COWARD Faggot Lee pathetically tries to justify his hiding behind anonymity in <3B8FFFF5.143FA...@houston-hunks.com>:

"...readers have already had uninvited people show up at their homes, have had people subscribe them to magazines and book clubs, have received hang-up calls in the middle of the night, have had poison pen letters written to their neighbors and employers, and have had poison pen email sent to their ISPs in an attempt to get their accounts canceled. That's not a "what if" scenario either: It has happened repeatedly to certain members of these news groups, yours truly included (one person has emailed repeated lies to Altopia in an attempt to learn my identity). One of our readers has even had to go to the courts and obtain an injunction against one of those nuts.

I choose not to give insane people like that any kind of edge in physically locating me, and if you think that's "cowardice", you are only demonstrating your profound ignorance of Usenet and of the kind of people who read these posts."

Then the no-balls coward ends his feminine cuntly whining with:
"And do you know what else? I AM SICK TO DEATH OF THOSE WHO REPEAT YOUR TIRED OLD, IGNORANT REFRAIN. Until you learn a few things, you ought to shut your arrogant mouth."

Staggering Drunk Lee, the "Pulitzer prize award-winning writer" slobbered the following Ebonics in <9a56ue$hi...@dosa.alt.net>:
"I hope yourself takes the advice you are giving to yourself."

SPANKARD Faggot Lee admits he's cross posted in order to help his pathetic, syphilitic ass win a flame war, if you can read his chicken scratching EBONICS in <3AA5A686.E2ACE...@some.net>:

"I have seen to it that some of JBO's irrational posts show up in alt.2600, because the owner of cotse practically lives there (tell you something?), and I wanted the owner of cotse to ?>xperience JBO's posts first hand. Cotse is doing a service to no one when t confuses freedom with license -- the typical error of the neophyte do->ooder -- and Roger's posts are a prime example of the typical esults that error."

Child abuser and FUCKUP Shemale Lee (SLee@houston-hunks.com) whined to the newsgroups as usual and admitted his defeat with a SPANKING by plonk
and his repressed wish to suck sperm by projecting it onto others in <kc8jbo.sucks.sperm@houston-hunks.com>:
"You know what? I think I'm going to add cotse and mailandnews.com to my filtering rules. I'm bored with you, Mr. Scatologist....<plonk>"

SLee@houston-hunks.com (Stagger Lee) confessed to his SPANKARD status in <nuking.waldo@houston-hunks.com>:
"Waldo has the honor of being the first poster in this news group that I've ever killfiled. To make sure he stays killed, all posts and all followups to posts from mailusenet.com will be nuked before I ever see them."

Fuckwit SLee@houston-hunks.com (Stagger Lee) supports illegal computer activities and terrorism in MsgId:
<pimple.on.my.ass@houston-hunks.com>:
"But I am delighted that cotse was hacked and DOSed to the point that it can't operate this weekend."

STUPID ASS "Stagger "king of wishful thinking" Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> blathered out of his well-reamed ass his hope to regain some face in message <0428120427.2...@houston-hunks.com>:
"One guess has it that KC8JBO lost his ability to post through cotse"

"Stagger Pee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> whined like a little girl in message in <04630.10999.00@houston-hunks.com>:

"Whatever piece of crap newsreader you're using, it just violated an RFC by putting whitespace in the Newsgroups header.

Stagger Pee has too much sperm in his eyes to know that a "_" is a character, not a space.

"As a reslult, many news servers are either going to chop off the second newsgroup that you added or else reject your post entirely."

Stagger Pee knows more about KFC than RFC, and as a "result" spittles out of his lardass. It would seem that something else was "chopped off" in Stagger Pee's case, but there wasn't much to lose.

AIDS INFECTED IGNORAMUS "Stagger Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> demonstrated his lack of education and tried to backpedal out of his use of "too"
instead of "two" in message <too.two_or_a.to@houston-hunks.com>:
"You too need to get a newsreader which generates a References header."

Fuckhead Lee slobbered his pathetic gene cesspool story in MsgId: <get.on.the....@houston-hunks.com>

"Since a couple of you are simply dying to know my true identity, let me give you a few tantalizing hints to see what you can do with them.

I'm going to tell you about my father (I used to call him "Dad" when we were alone).

Daddy was a basketball star at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Indiana. He lettered during all of his seven years as an undergraduate,

but then lost his eligibility when he took time out to write a thesis on the quantum electrodynamics of degenerate stellar atmospheres.

Unfortunately, the use of the word "degenerate" in his thesis nearly got him kicked out of Notre Dame. He straightened the situation out, and managed to graduate "semper ubi sub ubi" with the class of 1940, and immediately left for his favorite Chicago suburb -- Calumet City -- to start his life as a brand-new astrophysicist.

It was then that he got drafted into the army, so he put his ambitions aside and served his country as one of the most accomplished martial artists of the WWII era.

He had learned martial arts as a boy member of the Mafia in Chicago, and he single-handedly invaded several Japanese islands during WWII.
Mayor
Daily awarded him with the keys to the brothels of Chicago when he returned from the Pacific theatre, and that's how he met my mother.

Oh my. I may have given too much away: By now, you probably know precisely who I am."

Fuckup Shemale Lee fucks up again in <3D39C465.63A9C...@houston-hunks.com>:
"I wonder how long it will take Ohio Valley Internet Services to boot your ass?"

Fuckup Lee whines about crossposting and redirecting followups with
"The original post is spam, as can be seen by looking at the number of people who have already been tricked into responding in alt.bad.clams."

yet the hypocrite admits he did the same thing himself in <3D487543.91D08...@houston-hunks.com>:

==========
Anonymous coward and all-around fuckwit "Stagger Lee"

Oh, no. You are most definitely the poster of drivel. You may think you're "fighting the good fight" against (admittedly loathesome and putrid) homophobes, but you are in fact being a very lame net.KKKop, trying to tell other posters what to do in an exceedingly boring and Golden Killfile-worthy manner.

Golden Killfile

Given to the most killfile-worthy net.kooks on Usenet. This award recognizes exceptional killfilable merit; if you are unworthy enough to be ignored by everyone on the face of the earth, you are eligible for this award.

Incidentally, I'm bisexual, too, so this ain't homophobia on my part.
You're just a boring k00k who happens to be bi, though I compliment your taste in having Woger for an enemy.

an_old_friend is not bisexual. He is standing up to Mopey Dopey Steve Parks; who has accused me of being bisexual. Truly; methinks he doth protest too much; but that's another story.....

The power in wattage and the electrical field are not related because a power output in wattage can produce different fields depending on lengh of coax, antenna, antenna height...and your friends in the Office of engineering and technology at the FCC will tell you that. The antenna I'm using is a very imefficient antenna, in fact the signal is acually coming out of the end of the coax. The coax is a 65 feet of crappy coax I had that had been hit by lighting a few times and one piece even has holes in it. I have a Field strenght meter and at 17.5 meter I'm only getting a power reading of 2,000 uV. At 30 meters I'm getting no voltage. The thing you habe to remeber is that watts can produce different electrical fields and it's the electrical field the FCC is looking at not wattage.

Quit whining about "harassment", and /return fire/, dolt! This is usenet, and you can do a whole lot that you can't do IRL. Forging IP addresses is a genuine example of abuse, not merely flaming and

"BullDozer" aka ReelMckoi<geister@mailinator.com> is jabriol or Antonio L Santana from Camden NJ, the slandering liar trying to make a victim of himself to save face. It's typical Jehovahs Witness behavior. Jabriol also suffers from seizure caused delusions and hallucinations claiming he sees rapes of children and black women and dead bodies under trailers in his victim Carol's house. Does he lie or misqoute? See below.

I am bisexual never made any real secert of that dispite the efforts of s couple of parties to blackmail me for it

OTOH it is hardly a matter of taste having woger as an enemy he is an ememy to any form of ration thought

Cease and desist your whining. Such net.KKKoppery as this only makes you a killfilable twit to the rest of usenet. There _ain't_ no justice, and if you file a lawsuit, you will lose, badly and with immense humiliation. "Harassment", the real kind, includes phone calls to you personally, at home, at work, on your cell, and to your friends, family members, co-workers, bosses, and anyone who knows you IRL. You're just being flamed, lamed, and trolled by a bunch of brain-dead CB radio fuckwads. Get over it.

If you're into definitions, look up "sarcasm" (which an aphorism frequently is). But an aphorism can also be an opinion, whether true or not.

Again the FCC looks for electrical field strength, not wattage....you can put out 100 watts and still have a electrical field strength that complies with part 15....but a dumbass like you don't seem to understand that. Go for why your at it, since your buddies with hollingworth tell him, I said you and him should eat shit and die!

Tsk, Klein, you don't write enough to read. It's all about implications, inferences, and vague "truths" which don't establish anything. Then you get pissed off when others don't accept your "word" on things.

I will ask directly: ARE you an olde-fahrt? Or long-timer?
If so, HOW LONG?

Try not to be too vague on this. Real truth will establish your "rep" in here. So far you don't have much of a "rep" except we all know you are a PRO-CODER.

> "They didn't" ... "escape". Looks like the

I can't see anyone named "They didn't" in the Google message list, nor that of "escape."

Simply put, if you can't establish any bona fides for your alleged long-timerness, I'll just put you in the "imposter" list. [lots of folks from here in there...]

Irrelevant. No one posting to usenet can truly prove they are who they say they are, only, at most, that they are the same person posting all of the messages associated with a given PGP/GPG key, so decency doesn't matter. Usenet is a medium of entertainment more than one of discussion, so unless you wish to be commemorated by AUK as one who is net.dead, you will forget the net.KKKopping and "cease and desist" orders that simply do not apply and cannot (I repeat, cannot) be enforced.

<groan> Oh, by Cthulhu, Eris, and the Great White Handkerchief. No one is harassing you unless they are: 1) forging posts in your name and with your IP address; 2) making phone calls to you, your family, etc.; 3) sending you/your family/etc snail mail or messages in various other ways; 4) outright stalking you/your family/etc IRL or (in the workplace) making unwelcome advances upon you. If none of these things are happening, and you are just being flamed, lamed, and trolled (with sockpuppets being created in your honour), then you have no possible case for harassment. However, each unique sockpuppet is worth one UV point, and once you have ten points, you can turn them in for your very own Sombrero! As for what that's worth, nothing much, just entertainment value. If people are going to show you their rectums, you may as well take the opportunity to stick daisies, roses (with or w/o thorns), and other flowering plants in said holes.

Yes, I know, that's kind of fuckheaded, but I'm kind of a net.fuckhead. Ask anyone... There is, at any rate, no "other path", excepting the careful use of a killfile. "Cease and desist" Does Not Work, and Will Never Work. ISPs will ignore you. Everyone will ignore you.

You're the k00k, if you think that has any hope of effectiveness. You're not being harassed, you're whining about being flamed, lamed, and trolled. Oh, and frogged, too.

Well you put yourself off as Trevor. Bend over anyway. and you are Trevor the Limpdick old man.

You may be Dr. Death, but we ain't.
you may not use rubbers, thus get AIDS as you implicated, but folks here do.
Well bend over buddy and I'll put my salaami in ya LOL.

lucky group in the groups line -- don't you feel special? However, that's not all! For the low, low, LOW price of simply complaining about all the x-posting a bunch of times, we(tinw) can keep including your Man, you are painful to read...Anyway. Yes, you did post it exactly as quoted, failing to make it entirely clear to those not paying very close attention that it was your words in the post, not "U-Know-Who's".

Taken together with your net.KKKopping attitude in general, that's pretty damn k00ky. Boring, but k00ky. "Golden Killfile"-type boring, even.

There is another story Scott, the truth.

I can't take credit for outing your pathetic attempts to get attention, such as this post from you in alt.personals.bi. No, the credit for that goes to The Official Alt.Usenet.Kooks Funny Farm, and namely this part.

Circa 1996, Scott's humble beginnings are exemplified by pathetic attempts to get attention, such as this post in alt.personals.bi.

You'd have to be a complete idiot to only NOT be radiating more than Part 15 levels with 100 watts output at that frequency, Toiddie....Now if you were operating in the 1750 meter band, I could understand that kind of power loss.

Are YOU going to tell me that YOU, a General Class Amateur licensee are INTENTIONALLY operting with those kinds of losses...?!?!?

Too bad you didn't just clean up your language in the first place, which I see in the last couple of posts that you've done now...Too bad you didn't LEARN before you got shut down the FIRST time.

And Toiddie...No law prevents ANYone from suing if there is free service for a long, long time.

Ooooops....There you go agaian with the profanity...Working on getting booted THREE times, Toiddie? Each subsequent boot makes it easier to justify to the next ISP that you're deserving of punitive action.

Yes, you do.

You have shot your mouth off about evryone else being an "appliance operator" in the same manner you'd make an "expletive" about thier maternal parent's intimacies with animals, Toiddie.

I say there's nothing more "homebrew" about any aspect of N9OGL or any bootleg broadcast station you're running than the PL259's, or perhaps the occassional dipole.

This has nothing to do with suppressing ANYone's "free speech", Toiddie. It has to do with technical compliance with federal law, which EVERY person must do in the United States.

If you're generating 100 watts of RF at 13mHz to radiate a Part 15 level signal, I say you're an idiot...A WASTEFUL idiot at that.

What TECHNICAL JUSTIFICATION do you offer for operating in this manner?

Why do I care where else it may be "released", Brain? I'm an Amateur Radio licensee and I got the information from an Amateur Radio related website.

I am sure there is some press release somewhere doing exactly that, otherwise why would ARRL be reporting on some policy changes to which they were not privvy otherwise?.

So far, Brain, I have yet to see YOU explain HOW or WHY you came to some conclusion that I was giving credit to the ARRL for somethig that they didn't do, other than to publish a story about a story that ultimately involves Amateur Radio licensees.

My only point in providing the story here, and it appears I was successful, was rendering yet one more bit of evidence that you and your Feeble Five bretheren are woefully inept in gauging the state of emergency communications as it pertains to Amateur Radio related organizations.

And unless you can show me some staffing demographics to the contrary, yes, MARS (all three of them) ARE "Amateur Radio related"
organizations.

Sure it was taken out of context, Brain.

Your entire use of the "Sorry Hans, MARS >>>IS<<< Amateur Radio" comment has been all about trying to make that one line the whole story.

No one with an IQ over two digits believes you. it was lame and idiotic from the first day you tried it, and it's a shame you're still embarrassing yourself in public with it.

It's already been done.

You've been proven to be WRONG in each case already.

It's "...to A respectable..." Brain.

And no, my separation form the Corps is QUITE respectable and my sanity quite intact.

On the OTHER hand we have evidence in YOUR last couple of posts of silly accusations, misplaced attributes, false charges and generally LAME attempts to redirect from your own failed attempts at meaningful dialouge in this forum.

There's no nurse in Tennessee by that name, Brain.

> USMC wannabe,,,(SNIP)

Wasn't anything "wannabe" about it, Brain.

> Civil Air Patrol "Major" in a ragged flight suit with "Captains" bars.

"ragged"...?!?! Hardly. It is, within all parameters of military standards, still in "serviceable condition" status. One thing we Marines were taught was how to care for our gear.

And if you'd like a new picture, I'll get one up for you. And STILL able to put my chin on my chest and see my toes...No, not with any restraining devices as you've suggested in the past. I'd dare YOU to put a current picture of your fat little body in public!

> Looks like you found the ER drug cabinet unlocked again.

No...Actually I have a password to it.

Kinda funny you keep making this allegation. Why do you insist that you are so morally and practically superior to me, yet try to make lame allegations that are even more sandlot than some of Morkie's offerings...?!?!

> Slam it shut...(SNIP)

Why? That's dangerous and can jam the drawers. AccuDose is rugged, but CAN be broken. Why would you suggest such a course of action...?!?!

> Pretend nothing is missing...(SNIP)

Nothing is. If it were, AccuDose would flag it before each shift were over. I would have been "on the carpet" a long time ago and without a license to practice Nursing shortly thereafter.

> Try to act normal.

I'd suggest the same to you, but then I realized that this IS "normal" for you.

Too bad. Does your family know how you act in public, Brain?

Steve, K4YZ

You can't get around physics, Todd. The power density is directly related to the electric field through an Ohm's law type of relationship, expressed as the square of the r.m.s value of e, divided by the impedance of free space. Once you know the power density, it is a matter of summing that power density over the radiation pattern of the antenna to figure out the total radiated power. Therefore, there is a relationship between radiated power and field strength. In the case of an isotropic radiator, the relationship between radiated power and field strength is easy to calculate, and it provides one with a limiting case which can act as a guideline.

> engineering and technology at the FCC will tell you that. The antenna

I'm not interested in your rationalizations, Todd, because I'm not the one who is at risk. In this real world, your power output is about five orders of magnitude larger than the power theoretically needed to produce the maximum allowed electric field. To me, that would be a cause for great concern.

If you want to risk an FCC enforcement action against you, be my guest.

I find it amusing so many want to deny the very existance of this unit way is that?

after none of the cites prove I was there
of course it more than steve has done for his service but then twices

Sure he could, Davey. You cut and paste from other websites and add a few words do it looks like you know what the fuck you are talking about. You've been caught doing that before. Like the time you tried to pass off an Alabama ARES website for the one in Wiseman's area.

Tell us why you hide behind that fictitious negro name, fatass. Is it because you desperately want to find your real father, who is of that race?

>3-Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

Thats too whimpy. Morse code = Ham Radio, right?

Make it 20wpm for general, 30wpm for Extra.

Require extras to answer 100% on ALL questions of ALL element question pools in on ONE sitting with no multiple choice. You're not "extra" if you can't do that.

Stop granting type acceptance to any radio that can transmit or receive on the extra portion of the band (just like the rule for the cell phone frequencies).
Extras should be building radios, not buying them.

>4-Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Eliminate the no code license, wait ten years for the hobby to die, then give 2.3ghz to WiFI, 5.7 to WiMAX and auction the rest off to the highest bidder.

Looking forwards to working you on the 10ghz-and-up contest this weekend, Glen

Mark, Just ignore them.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look more stupid.

Take a break from the radio groups for a while, Maybe work on your

Mark, Just ignore them.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you
follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look
more stupid.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you
follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look
more stupid.

Mark, Just ignore them.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you
follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look
more stupid.

Take a break from the radio groups for a while, Maybe work on your

Indeed the result was the persuit simply continued into the real Wolrd with Robeson sending threats and harrassemnt to me and my family and reports of my alleged crimes and dealing with LE indeed that I why I returned was learning robeson was behind the effort to report to authorities that I was abusing my father

indeed the current project is to answer without answering it works well on Wismen unless Robeson shows up to Whine, whine, whine. The thing to do with the 'phobes is mock their (lack of) intelligence, not whinge and cry at them to stop it, like a geeky kid in a schoolyard. No one has any reason to "cease and desist" on your say-so alone, and no one will. If you can LART them, go ahead and do it -- mere threats and requests to stop will accomplish nothing but earn you a Golden Killfile award, aka net.death. If you can't LART them, quit whining and start mocking! Mind you, I suppose your dyslexia prevents effective mockery. Nevertheless, you haven't a clue what "harassment" is, if you think you've been experiencing it. It's far more than just flaming, laming, trolling, and frogging -- without the personal, "real-life" element, you're just a crybaby.

Imcidentally, Woger Wiseman is a pedo-K00k!

No. You cease and desist. Net.KKKopping, such as what you are currently trying and failing to do, is a blight upon usenet, and all who do it are the worst sort of ko0ks and fascist creeps. Keep it up, and you _will_ earn that Golden Killfile, whereupon only clueless n00bs and other net.dead k0oks (most of whom are among the vilest of homophobes, WRT latter group) will ever reply to you.

I would really suggest you read the FCC Office of Engineering and technology bulletin on PART 15, it OET Bulletin 63
http://www.fcc.gov/Bureaus/Engineering_Technology/Documents/bulletins/oet63/oet63rev.pdf expecially page 29 which states:

What is the relationship between "microvolts per meter" and Watts?

Watts are the units used to describe the amount of power generated by a transmitter. Microvolts per meter (µV/m) are the units used to describe the strength of an electric field created by the operation of a transmitter. A particular transmitter that generates a constant level of power (Watts) can produce electric fields of different strengths (μV/m) depending on, among other things, the type of transmission line and antenna connected to it. Because it is the electric field that causes interference to authorized radio communications, and since a particular electric field strength does not directly correspond to a particular level of transmitter power, most of the Part 15 emission limits are specified in field strength.

So logically if you use a ineffecient antenna and Shitty coax then you can create a low enough field....I'm tell you right now, I Have a field strength meter that reads microvolts, and I check the field ever morning, at it's not at no 30 meters either, it's around 17.5 meters and the electrical field is 1,0000 uV ...So believe what the hell you want I check it every morning and it's 1,000 uV @17.5 meters and at 30 meters it's 0. I would also point out I come from a long line of electricians (my father, my grandfather and my great grandfather) and THEY will back me up.

No, first I intend to humiliate you completely, if you don't cease and desist your filthy net.KKKopping. Oh, and I don't mean "...I'm going to killfile you". Oh, no. No, the Golden Killfile is an alt.usenet.kooks award, which I will generously repeat below:

Golden Killfile

Given to the most killfile-worthy net.kooks on Usenet. This award recognizes exceptional killfilable merit; if you are unworthy enough to be ignored by everyone on the face of the earth, you are eligible for this award.

With any luck, you'll end up killfiled by half of usenet (or more, better yet), assuming you intend to keep on crying at people to "cease and desist." Note that this award requires people to vote on it, though.

OTOH, you _could_ try your hand at displaying to us the k00ks you have encountered in the rec.radio.* groups, but you seem to think people are expected to "play nice" on usenet. Please, allow me to disabuse you of that wild notion: That's only alt.cuddle, and the moderated froups. Flaming, laming, trolling, and even frogging are not TOS-able offences, and you _will_ be ignored by ISPs if you complain to them.

What part of this don't you understand?? are you some come of fucking moron?? THE FCC MEASURES ELECTRICAL FIELD, POWER IN WATTS CAN PRODUCT DIFFERENT ELECTRICAL FIELDS DEPENDING ON ANTENNA, FEED LINE AND OTHER FACTORS...I put in big letters so you can fucking understand it.

No this is what our educational system does to EE's. PCB layout and CAD work will bring them back to reality.

he is Ham operator K4YZ is his call he uses several none posting mostly varriants onthe call sign at aol and yahoo but his name Steve Robeson as well

started 8 years ago when I dared disagree with about Morse code testing and decided to threnten my murder while as It happens Iwasn't even home so he voiced his threat to my father on the phone. has conitued various efforts at harrassment in both the real and virual world ever since. (threats of mruder meyhem falsereports to Law Enforcement of Rape child molesting, welfare fraud and anything else. Since feeding the troll does seem to slow the offline stuff to a near stop, I feed the troll, and will continue to do so as long as seem deseriable to ME

Hail Eris!

Since there appear to be some severe misapprehensions as to the nature and purpose of AUK in certain of the rec.radio.* froups, it seems quite apropos to post the AUK FAQ here (Any disagreement with my point of view on this will either be ignored or re-directed to the FNVW; homophobic disagreement will be re-directed to Mark Morgan; any disagreement more brainless than that is at risk of attention from Fred Teh Bot; ok, I tell a lie, all disagreement is at risk of attention from Fred. In fact, everyone is. Beware.):

1. What is this newsgroup, alt.usenet.kooks (AUK)?

A mass of electrons spread out upon bandwidth scattered across the globe for the express purpose of separating the wheat from the chaff of the net.

2. This is a joke, right? RIGHT?!!

No more a joke than the fact that ISPs let people on every day who have nothing better to do than annoy their neighbors enough to win by popular vote silly little awards created for just such buffoons as them.

3. What's this newsgroup for?

The newsgroup alt.usenet.kooks is for the discovery and discussion of Kooks on Usenet and the Internet. These people are known technically as net.kooks.

4. What's this newsgroup NOT for?

This group exists for recreational Kookology, not for Very Personal Vendetta. It is not to be used for general harassment of someone, or for net abuse such as spamming and flooding and cancelbombing in an attempt to gain vengeance on someone or get the denizens of AUK to shut up. Either way, it won't work, it's very messy, "Bob" will give you triple your money back, and you don't get a life.

Also, we [tinw] are not in the business of harassing the vulnerable or the insane. Occasionally an apparent net.kook proves to be genuinely ill. In such cases the person is disqualified from winning awards and other posters are asked to avoid exarcerbating his or her problems. Similarly, trolling or kook-hunting in support groups is strongly discouraged.

5. Who let this newsgroup in here, and why wasn't I notified?

That's what you get for hogging the Beer Fund.

(Here you can view the control message that started it all, from our Mighty Founder MAC.)

http://www.netcabal.com/auk/cmsg.html

6. Who is a net.kook?

If you post uniquely strange, preferably incomprehensible articles, or you manifest a persistent, extreme, and somewhat bizarre obsession, you just might be a net.kook. And more.

It is important to note the subtle distinction between a net.kook, a net.cretin, a clueless newbie, troll, or garden-variety @$$hole. The newbie, one hopes, can acquire a clue on the installment plan even if he can't afford to buy one for cash; the cretin is merely stupid and/or irritating; the troll makes a fool out of himself by making a fool out of you, the @$$hole is, well, simply that. But a TRUE net.kook has a special fascination derived from his/her/its utter ineffability. Their behavior is irrational, if not downright weird, but they are seldom merely boring.

It is not considered appropriate to nominate clueless newbies, trolls, or longwinded spambrains as net.kooks. It is acceptable to nominate net.cretins, or simply to present them, without nomination, for whatever minor amusement value they may have; but the real focus here is on net.kooks in all their raging, indomitable glory.

Important Disclaimer: the fact that someone has been proclaimed a net.kook does not imply any psychological diagnosis in and of itself. A net.kook may or may not be clinically insane; that is not the concern of the AUK audience.

We hope.

7. Can you show me a few examples?

I'd rather not, but it may help to clarify things... The person who posted a handful of meaningless, ill-formed newgroup messages on May 21, 1994 was a Clueless Newbie. The person who hung around alt.religion.kibology during April and May 1994, constantly posting boilerplate "warning" messages telling people that ARK messages were intentionally meaningless, was a net.cretin. The people who post demented "scientific" theories, like Archimedes Plutonium's concept of the universe being one giant atom of plutonium, and seem incorrigible to criticism, are moderate net.kooks. The sort of being who constantly raves about the conspiracy against her/him/it is an extreme net.kook, especially if he/she/it automatically assumes that anyone who questions their world-view is an agent of the conspirators or is an ultra right-wing/left-wing extremist, and hides behind an anonymous remailer to avoid "persecution" even though they would get one hell of a lot less of it by not posting at all.

8. How do I present a Kook on this group?

The preferred technique is to get the suspected Kook to start posting to AUK so that we can all see him/her/it in all their first-hand Glory. You can do this by posting followups to the suspect's weirder messages, with your followups nonchalantly crossposted to AUK. If the suspect responds to your messages without editing the Newsgroups line, you've achieved your goal.

Another acceptable method is to repost, complete and unedited, one or two of the suspected Kook's recent rants. If you do this, please provide a brief intro in the header describing what the hell you're doing, such as indicating who this person is, what group you found the message on, or why you think the rest of us should give a rat's @$$ about it.

You should be aware that if you try this with some perfectly reasonable posting, you may be flamed to net.hell and back and probably suspected of being a net.loon yourself. It is also considered extremely lame to nominate someone as a Kook simply because you have lost, or at least failed to win, a debate with them; persistently doing so is likely to get you nominated for Kook Awards. That someone fails to perceive the self-evident, unassailable wisdom of your viewpoint does not, in and of itself, constitute Kookery.

9. What are the Kook Awards?

The newsgroup alt.usenet.kooks offers a variety of widely-recognized and highly dubious honors for your service, applying to net.kooks everywhere. They recognize several kinds and many levels of net.kookery.

Here is a detailed list of AUK awards and descriptions.

http://www.netcabal.com/auk/awards.html

10. Who the FSCK appointed YOU net.kookologist/god/nazi etc.

Nobody. We have a Gift.

11. Are there any holidays in AUK?

Why yes, there sure are:

March 30th - CALL to ARMMs

Commemorating the earliest most virulent Kook post flood of Usenet, and the great flamewar that followed in its wake.

June 26th - KOOKS DAY

Named in commemoration of Earl Curley checking into the Motel Deep 6 to serve a major in the pine penalty box, the same date as Edmond Wollmann got arrested riding the San Clemente railway...on his motorcycle.

August 15th - DEAD DOC TAVISH DAY

Named in honor of the death of one of Usenet's most famed identities due to excessive Usenet exposure; his virtual corpse is buried in a rural cemetery near New Bremen, Texas

September 10th - KAZOO DAY

This holiday commemorates Raymond Ronald "Kazoo" Karczewski's conviction for seven felonies. May Raymold be a warning to all kooks who are tempted to think that a "Sovereign Christ" is above the law.

December 20th - AUK BIRTHDAY

The anniversary of the newgrouping of alt.usenet.kooks

12. What should I do if I'm paged on the Red Courtesy Telephone?

Give the caller Gandalf the Gray's speech to the demon. Verbatim.

13. Is alt.usenet.kooks archived anywhere?

Why would you even want to know? [But if you truly must know, GIYF. You masochist, you.]

14. What should we do about the book?

Burn it.

15. Where can I find out more about net.kooks?

Several mini-FAQs on classic kooks of the past and present (along with several non-kooky legendary netters) are available on the World Wide Web in various archives. Be sure to set aside coffee and cats before reading. [Try insurgent.org/kook-faq/]

16. What are the AUK Offices?

As well as the kook awards, kooks may compete to hold office for a month or longer. Nominations are made in exactly the same way as for awards; the difference is that the previous holder of the office always appears on the ballot paper when a new candidate emerges, and the winner remains in office until challenged again. At present, the offices are as follows.

Darth Bawl -

This office is held by Usenet's biggest crybaby.

Village Idiot -

The name says it all.

Kooki Information Minister -

Named in honour of Iraq's Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf, this office is held by the kook whose claims are most noticeably at variance with known facts.

Ministry of Circle Jerks -

Although many kooks are lone wolves, a few like to make friends with those who are as delusional as themselves. This office rewards the slurpfests that often ensue.

17. Are there any net.kook awards outside of AUK?

At various points of time there have been several, from the Christian groups' Steebie Award to alt.fan.art-bell's Angstrom Medal. At least two newsgroups, talk.politics.guns and comp.systems.mac.advocacy, have given out their own Kook of the Month awards. Check around from time to time to see what other net.kook awards might be around. [alt.atheism does them, too.]

18. What is the Cabal?

From the beginning of Usenet time, there has been but one force capable of holding it in check to remain in the realm of mortal existence. For today's Usenet world you need a Giant. A Behemoth. A Cabal of IMMENSE PROPORTIONS. A REALLY BIG CABAL to offer all news ORDER.

Within this force is the most ruthless and efficient organization on all Usenet, known as the Cabal Obsidian Order (COO). If YOU wish to know of this entity, read, learn, and do as you will.

SEE THE LIGHT OF COLLECTIVE WISDOM!!!

A. I SAID, what is the CABAL?

There Is No Cabal. Long Live The Cabal.

B. How does the Cabal function??

As well as any apocryphal organization can hope to function.

C. What are the weaknesses of the Cabal?

<chortle> What weaknesses?

D. What is the hierarchy and power structure of the Cabal?

Oh, you don't need to know that. Really. You can trust us, especially when it comes to information you haven't paid for.

E. What is the Cabal Obsidian Order?

The Cabal Obsidian Order (COO) is a profoundly secret collective of operatives designed to outrun, outgun and Eliminate the most vile scum and villainy the net has to offer.

F. How do I know if the COO is responsible for something?

If the COO's operatives are doing their job correctly, they'll be laughing at whoever is actually responsible.

G. Who are the leaders of the COO?

Leaders? Where we function we don't need Leaders.

H. What is the Beer Fund?

The more you contribute to it, the more we will tell you.

I. How may I apply to become an operative of the COO?

Pitiful begging at the Vote Wrangler's feet might help. Then again it might not.

19. Who is the FNVW?

Why, our highly esteemed Friendly Neighbourhood Vote Wrangler (FNVW), whose benevolent supreme dictatorship runs the electoral wheels of our great realm. Seven fearless folk have served, with distinction:

AUK VOTE WRANGLERS

Craig Dickson (1994-1995)
Matthew Legare (1995-1997)
Killfile Daemons (1997)
Robbie Honerkamp (1997-1998)
Phoenix (1997-2004)
Peter J Ross (2004-2006)
Sean Monaghan (2006-Present)

On retirement, Phoenix accepted the high office of Friendly Neighborhood "Bob"father.

20. Do I have what it takes to BE a Vote Wrangler?

<chortle> If you have to ask, you don't have what it takes.

21. Who do you %$#@!s think you are to oppose ME, Lord High Poster-Child of the Macrocosmic Universe?

We are the ones who can and will humiliate your @$$ if you use our group as your personal piss bowl. You are a freak of the universe. You do not give the orders here. And whether you like it or not, the universe is laughing behind your back.

22. That was MEAN, just plain MEAN!!!

Payback's a bitch, ain't it?

23. Should I expect ONE CONSISTENT response to my rude and obnoxious online behavior from the denizens of AUK?

Absolutely NOT.

24. To whom should I complain if I think I have been treated unfairly?

<Darth Vader>
You think you have been treated unfairly? </Darth Vader>

25. What kind of response can I expect as a result of my stupid online behavior at AUK?

Guilty party receives one or a combination thereof of the following assorted reactions (not at all limited to these, mind you):

1. Complete silence while we blow you off
2. Complete silence while we reload
3. Complete silence while we pull the plug on your account
4. Complete silence while we sleep at the switch
5. Complete silence while we sleep in our beds
6. Complete silence while we laugh behind your back
7. Complete silence while we wipe the splattered food and/or drinks off our screens
8. Complete silence while we contemplate the known macrocosmic universe
9. Complete silence while the Vote Wrangler pays good money to watch professional Denver teams find new ways to lose
10. Complete silence while we bask in the pure glow of our obnoxiously self-righteous selves
11. Complete silence while we play high-stakes poker with Snoopy, Spike, Andy, Olaf, Marbles and Woodstock
12. Complete silence while we never notice your NoCeM'd post
13. Complete silence while we never notice your spam-canceled post
14. Complete silence while we run your rude and obnoxious posts through goofyizers for reposting
15. Complete silence while the Trekkies among us watch the USS Defiant blast bad guys' ships into rubble and fly through the debris with that nice halo of sparks effect
16. Complete silence while we wait for our Gates-sponsored software systems to uncrash themselves
17. General laughter at your expense
18. General laughter and pointing at your expense
19. General laughter, pointing and personal insults at your expense
20. Someone exposes your true service provider to the Rabble
21. Someone does any of 1-20 and reports you to your state's Attorney General
22. Someone does any of 1-21 and reports you to the FBI National Computer Crime Squad (nccs@fbi.gov)
23. Someone does any of 1-22 and does highly amusing parodies of you during the entire process
24. Talk amongst ourselves about life, love and why they sell 8-hot-dog weenie sets with 10-bun packages
25. Sounds of awe as we wonder with dropped mouths how you were able to make a greater fool of yourself than you already had
26. Sounds of astonishment as we MARVEL at the FREAK
27. Flames in your generally specific direction
28. Flames of you in the third, fourth and fifth person
29. Flames from the Vote Wrangler from the other side of the Galactic Killfile just to annoy all hell out of you
30. Nominations for many noteworthy Kook awards

26. Can I really be kicked off my ISP for...

Being a total @$$hole?

If you try hard enough.

Top-posting like the pathetic imbecile that I am?

Usually not, but we can always try.

Forging someone else's valid e-mail address?

Absolutely.

Posting multiple copies of the same message to individual news groups (Excessive Multi Posting [EMP])?

Of course. It's the SPAMMING, stupid.

27. Can I really be thrown in jail for posting threatening messages?

Yes. People have been tried and convicted for sending threatening or harassing Email or Usenet posts. We do NOT support censorship of the Internet; however, posting a message stating you are going to cause virtual or unvirtual harm to someone will probably gain you a visit from your Friendly Neighborhood FBI Agent.

28. Fine. I'll just remain anonymous. That'll work, right?

BWWAAAAAAAAA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA HA!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Try it, pinkboy. An anon remailer service can be forced to turn you in for copyright violation, harassment, stalking; you name the crime - they've got the time. If you ran an anon remailer service what would be the point of protecting flagrant abusers of the net and the Law??

29. Okay, then I'll bust your #$%&$*!! @$$ off AUK instead!

Uh... yeah. Many denizens of AUK are abuse admins, know abuse admins, sleep with abuse admins, or otherwise have years of experience dealing with and educating others about precisely your kind of dubiosity. A good account is a terrible thing to waste, so don't sacrifice yours on our altar.

30. I just realized I am a Maroon. How can I improve my standing in the eyes of the Internet, my balloon doll, and, most importantly, "Bob"?

REPENT. The End is always near.

Ah, no. See the FAQ I just posted for AUK. Also, note that you and a fair number of your compadres in the rec.radio groups are also eligible for various awards and offices, due to your and their own k00ky behaviour. Here's a link explaining what I mean by "k00ky" behaviour:

http://www.insurgent.org/~jhd/kookway.htm

Also, here's a quote from Teh Mighty Kali, our resident war goddess, to Linda Gore:

"The awards granted by alt.usenet.kooks are the official Usenet kook awards, Linda. They were not created for the purpose of devaluing acts of kindness. They were created, and are maintained, for the purpose of recognizing abusive posters. Your fellow nominees are liars, bigots, frauds, forgers, defamers, screed spammers, people who falsely accuse others of stalking when they themselves are the stalkers, etc. You get the picture. If you don't, return to the above link and read.

"Not just anyone can be nominated; there are standards that must be upheld. No one may be nominated for purposes of revenge or a joke. Not all nominations are accepted. There must be evidence of abuse."

In Mark's case, there is plenty of evidence to convict him of spamming. However, in your case, Wiseman's, and various others', you have repeatedly and incessantly displayed monumental levels of homophobia, racism, sexism, and general fuckwittedness. If he has been abusive, the rest of you have been monstrous. In fact, I think the rec.radio.* froups seem like a great little fixer-upper for the MEOW re-decorators...

I think both of them should hop up on each other's shoulders and tell the other "I love you". Then they can honeymoon together in Thailand and take the gay NAMBLA tour like JonBenet's killer did....

That is why we always register for Pwofessow Woger's classes on negative VSWR and especially his classes on RMS voltage.
Pwofessow Woger has perfect attendance at ARES meetings in

Yet he didn't have to cut and paste from another website and add a few comments so it looks like he wrote the whole thing like you did. Tell us again how Eric Clapton wrote "Layla" for your ex streetwalker wife

: Watts are the units used to describe the amount of power generated by a

: of power (Watts) can produce electric fields of different strengths
: (ï¿½V/m) depending on, among other things, the type of transmission line
: and antenna
[snip]

Todd, there isn't a law you can quote which governs physics. You can't repeal the law of gravity, and you can't logically state that transmitter power and electric field strength are independent of one another. Think about it: That idea doesn't even make sense.

: So logically if you use a ineffecient antenna and Shitty coax then you

Do you know the difference between the far and near fields? Are you aware that an ordinary field strength meter can give you wildly incorrect results when it is placed in the near field of an antenna?
Most engineers would tell you that you have to be at least five wavelengths away from the antenna (and preferably ten) before you are out of the influence of the near field. At 33 MHz, the wavelength is roughly nine meters; therefore, your meter is in the near field of the antenna, and all bets are off.

: and the electrical field is 1,0000 uV ...So believe what the hell you
: want I check it every morning and it's 1,000 uV @17.5 meters and at 30
: meters it's 0. I would also point out I come from a long line of : electricians (my father, my grandfather and my great grandfather) and
: THEY will back me up.

Sigh. That's what we need: Electricians who never even heard of free

Top Ten Signs Your Home is in Glendale, WV

10. Someone asks, "What died in here?" and you show them

9. Dust on TV screen gives everybody comical Andy Rooney eyebrows

8. When the FCC mobile lab pulls up in front of your house, Riley Hollingsworth refuses to get out of the van

7. The so-called "Dust Bunnies" have sharp, snapping teeth

6. Your house gets hit by a twister and it actually looks better

5. Guests take one look at your bathroom and decide to use the backyard

4. When someone from the health department rings your doorbell, you say, "Not again!"

3. Every time you turn on a faucet, you hear a muffled barking sound

2. Even Mark Morgan refuses to sleep on your floor

1. You've been receiving death threats from Mr. Clean

Have you noticed that Roger seems torn about your identity? Sometimes he thinks you're Lloyd. Sometimes he believes you to be me. At other times he believes you to be a number of others.

I believe that your number 4 in the above list is not quite complete. Roger might exclaim (very quietly) "Not again!", but he won't answer the door.

I'm still waiting for him to test his theory that I'd never go face-to-face with him.

Do you know if Roger has ever been involuntarily committed to a mental institution?

I saw no evidence that he did so, Rog. Can you provide links to where we can find the originals?

You seem to be laboring under some confusion, Roger. I didn't write the material to which you responded. I've posted under no sock puppets, ever. Don't measure others by your standard.

I don't have an ex-streetwalker wife. Since I know how my wife spells her name, I'd hardly have been mistaken about the origina of the Clapton song, especially since my wife was in adolescence when the song was released, Stupid.

"So do you hiding..."? Let's see: My wife never worked as a streetwalker; I've never hidden behind her. I don't lisp. You're batting .000, Rog. If you'd like to test your little theory that I'd not meet you face-to-face, I'm more than willing to participate. You and I can have a real heart-to-heart.

Have you ever been confined in jail or a mental institution, Rog?

Wants to? He'd doing a pretty good job of spamming. You are not only a troll and a spammer, you're an expert in the posting of filth!

You alluded to some experience with moonbounce, Rog. I'm waiting for some details. Tell us what you know about it.

What's your primary defect, Rog? Were you abused as a child or was it the rejection by your birth mother?

Can you provide us the name of your only friend, Rog? Are you helping him clean up his yard? Stick with it. The old fellow up the road may be able to help you in breaking the cycle of sociopathy.

While I understand that anything you post is deserving of posting to alt.usenet.kooks, I've taken the liberty of removing it and the other superfluous groups as addressees.

Apparently it won't do that, no matter how much he spams. After all, you are harrassing him. Mark has plenty of issues, but next to you, he looks pretty harmless.

With a little work, I think Google can be convinced to bar you from using its "Groups" posting service. That'll be tough on your, since you aren't able to post as yourself.

Did you read about the recent FCC action in yanking the amateur radio license of a fellow, based on character issues? I think you'll find it very interesting reading.

If Stagger Lee was me, wouldn't he know about the difference between Marshall County, Alabama and Marshall County, West Virginia? Your wild claim just doesn't ring true, Rogie.

I'm sure that your ilk thinks that anyone who stands against the likes

I've seen the alleged "turd poems", whining k00ky crybaby. You can't handle him posting mean things about you, so you out his personal info.
You are a fucking k00k, and jail time may be in your future.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you
follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look
more stupid.

Nice attempt at misdirection, but a very old technique. :-)

That sort of misdirection is puerile (meaning childish).
If you have some bona fides on English grammar and some false idea that ALL must be literal with NO departure from such literalness, please state them. Otherwise go into auto-fornication mode since we ain't buyin that, homie. :-)

Let's reprise. First you state that capacitors were never color coded. You got called on that and corrected by more than myself. Secondly, you've never admitted being wrong or corrected. Third, you try to (badly) convince others that those who corrected your statement are "wrong" or "at fault."

Amazing. You make mistakes and then try to convince all that those mistakes never happened or that it is "wrong" to try to correct your mistakes! :-)

Here's some more to chew on:

RFCs (Radio Frequency Chokes, inductors) in axial-lead plastic tubular packages are STILL marked with color-code bands. There's a MIL SPEC on that as all "long-time design engineers" should know; such parts are even used in commercial market electronics.
It's really irrelevant HOW capacitors are marked as long anyone using them can know their value and working voltage and tolerance and apply them properly.

There are 7 (seven) amateur radio licensees in the USA that could answer to "Al Klein." Are you one of those?

I can say without hesitation that I am NOT a licensed amateur.
I am a licensed commercial-professional in radio and have been so for 50 years, beginning in military 24/7 big-time HF communications 53 1/2 years ago. I have all sorts of valid documentation on that and some in here have seen some of that.
Do you have ANYTHING in the way of ID? On the Internet?

Or, are you going to scribble meaningless misdirections in here, attempting to portray some personal "outrage" for being corrected? Especially about a well-known electronic component identification method which you don't seem to know yet others can verify?

I'll just put you down as an IMPOSTER poster, one of those wanna-bees who might never have been anything but really, really wants to be someone. That's up to you. I don't care.
I've seen your kind on the Internet, on the Bulletin Board Systems since 1984. None have anything worthwhile to contribute but all wanting to be a SOMEBODY on screens.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you
follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look
more stupid.

No, first YOU misunderstood "didn't escape being color coded" as meaning "didn't get color coded". Then you tried to weasel out of

I know it, you know it...tell it to the FCC beacuse THEIR the ones saying there isn't . I would right now like to point out that I'm NOT using a Isotropic radiator.

Again it's NOT my rational it's the FCC's but like I told Stebie the HAM and Internet COP if you have a problem with it, go bitch to The FCC and I'll throw their little bulletin both in theirs and the judges face, along with a few other things.. including how much of sick joke

That's how they have lied all these years about the waivering process, they go to the courts saying one thing, then turn around and do another. Same thing here, they publish bulletins saying one thing and then go after people who's following the same rules, claiming something different.

If they want to complain about the station they can file the complaint here

http://www.fcc.gov/eb/sed/ulo.html
Complaints

Written complaints alleging violations of Section 301 of the Communications Act should be sent to the Federal Communications Commission, Enforcement Bureau, Spectrum Enforcement Division, 445 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20554. Complaints should include the name of the operator, if known, how the station identifies itself, the location of the station, the operating frequency, the type of station being operated, and whether the station's operation is causing interference.

For complaints involving unlicensed amateur radio operations, please click here.

For complaints involving unlicensed broadcast station operations, please click here.

But I will fight it ever step of the way, I would like them (the FCC) to explain to the judge why they didn't consider my Seven (7) broadcast applications and Waivers?? So all I ahve to tell stebie and his butt buddies go for it!!!

Just WHAT IS * TEA-BAGGING * anyway ??

from: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Teabagging

Teabagging is a slang term for the act of a man placing his genitals, specifically the scrotum,
on the face, head, or in the mouth of another person. Windmilling is striking someone in the face with a penis (also known as a Fodunk, a "Turkey Slap", a "Mushroom Stamp", and a "Love Slap").

As a sexual practice, "teabagging" refers to a man dipping his testicles into the mouth of his partner
as a form of oral sex; thus his partner was "teabagged", as the practice vaguely resembles dipping a teabag in a cup of water. Sometimes teabagging is taken to specifically mean the act of a male stripper repeatedly tapping and grinding his testicles into a patron's forehead. In this case the patron was "teabagged."

Teabagging first entered pop culture in John Waters' cult film Pecker (as an act - the forehead variety of teabagging - banned in a particular male strip club). Waters discovered the practice at a Baltimore bar called the Atlantis. He also claims it has since been superseded by the related act of helicoptering, "where they whap-whap you in the face with their hard-on" [1]. The term was more recently described in detail in the DVD Extras of The Aristocrats by Hank Azaria and also on the television series Sex and the City and appeared again in the film Soul Plane, included in a list of sexual acts and later defined. On the DVD of the film Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back, Jay sings a song which includes the line "teabag my balls" in one deleted scene.
It also appears in America (The Book) by the staff of The Daily Show and has been referenced on the television show by its host, Jon Stewart. It also appears as a kind of teenage party hoax in the movie In My Father's Den and in Brandon Vaughn's common acts of degradation DVD.
It is featured in the HBO series Curb Your Enthusiasm (season 1, episode 3). It was described on an episode of the television series Law and Order: Special Victims Unit. Finally, on July 30th 2002, the term was used several times on the air during a serious newscast when Captain Janks made a crank call. Also referenced in a dialog between David Cross and Michael Cera in an episode of Arrested Development (Dec, 2005). It is also used in the American version of Takeshi's Castle (MXC) whenever the green suited sumo wrestler (named the Green Teabagger) wins by sitting near the contestants face.

On the hit MTV show Newlyweds, Jessica Simpson, Jessica and her Mom went out shopping and stumbled upon a brand of clothes labeled "teabagging", they then went on to discussing what they thought the term meant.

A variant known as a roman helmet or roman soldier involves laying the penis along the person's nose while placing the testicles on their eyes, somewhat resembling the helmet of a Roman legionary. This can also be referred to as a Gonziano in reference to the Muppet character Gonzo, who has a long, phallic nose. "Roger's Profanisaurus" also refers to this as the "Dutch blindfold". This practice, widely known in high-school and fraternity party circles, has become known as a "Famous Henry." In some areas of the country, particularly Minnesota, this practice is known as a "Cap'n Crunch," for the hat worn by the iconic breakfast cereal mascot.

As practical joke Teabagging can also be practiced as a practical joke. This is sometimes known as cat-braining or Cock Slapping, after the appearance of the scrotum; an alternate term is hanging brain, a term
also used as a level name in the computer game Marathon Infinity. In its joking form, teabagging is attributed as a shaming or a degradation of the victim. The practice is most common among high school and college males. Teabagging often occurs when these males are intoxicated with alcohol and have a camera at hand. Afterwards, it is not uncommon to see flyers, postings and e-mails of the victim, with a scrotum across the forehead, in an attempt to socially consummate the shaming aspect of this male ritual.
In addition to the well known and often used scrotum on the forehead variation of teabagging there is also the act of dipping one male's scrotum into the drink of another unbeknownst to the victim. This too is most frequently done while the males are intoxicated.
If time permits, multiple males dip their scrotums into one drink.
The act is only revealed to the drinker after the beverage has been finished.

Nothing "libelous" or "unsupported" when making a fool out of you,
fatboy.

And I for one don't WANT you to "cease and desist" posting. Each and every post you make just further supports my allegations of what an idiot you are.

The last part of that explanation above sheds a whole new light on ole ex-14.313 mHz's Dumbass Donnie's favorite radio buddy and his peculiar and eccentric on the air habits from up in MN !

Gee. I miss listening to the kook from GA and his matching 8-Ball bookend from MN. Now all we gots left in BLB in OK on 14.313 in the daytime and his buddies who all sound like they are 3 steps away from the cemetary vault.....

Gotta enjoy these ham radio clowns folks, their bad health habits (95% of em smoke, eat Big Mac's daily, don't exercize etc...) and often advanced age means that they won't last long.
Which is also good news as their XYL's usually can't wait to unload all their "ham radio junk" a week after they've been planted, which means easy pickup and re-sale $$'s on E-Screw.

I just F-N love it all !!

Incidentally, this nomination should be corrected to read, "Mark 'an old friend' Morgan for Golden Killfile". Also, note, if you will, that Woger is among his more vicious enemies. I think it's getting close to the proper time to deal with that fuckstain...Of course, I refer only to kook award nominations. <looks innocently at AHM>

Boring is the point Trans I can be very boring when I choose thus the effort to crosspost and trol for your attentions

OTOH IF the omplied threat were carried out I wonder how many posters would drop off the web at once 20 or so I think we have Robeson admiting his goal is Mayhem and that he enjoys it we also have Robeson making the silly claim I could "take it elsewhere" where I can't unless of course I gave robeson what he wants that I like so many before leave RRAP

we more inane whining from Wismen

we the new fish complaining that I am being boring (wih is nice to read when that is the gaol of get help bless you and cease and desist to bore the flamer in to giving it up failing that to show who is stiring
the pot

I agree Bob, and maybe we'd have better operators as a result. Considering the waning interest in our dying hobby though, all that would probably do is eliminate even more operators from the ranks, leading the FCC to reduce our bands even more by selling them to the highest bidder.

Ham radio was so much better back in the late 70's, when I first became licensed. People were polite, and the radio had a mystique to it. With the internet and the immediate gratification that everyone seems to expect these days, Ham Radio is undesirable; having to hunt for contacts when you can just IM someone? Having to work for a license? Not anymore, no one wants to put any effort into anything when they have an easier alternative. Unfortunately, the good old days are gone, and ham radio is in the sunset of its existence.

What is to "misunderstand?" Brian Burke wrote in that fashion, perhaps too colloquially for your absolutely-literal standards of English, but it was perfectly clear to most readers here.

>Then you tried to weasel out of >looking like the ass you are by looking even more stupid.

Trying to insult those who challenge your "knowledge" of electronic components isn't going to win you any points.

The FACT is that capacitors and axial-lead inductors have been color-coded for decades. That can be verified by looking at component manufacturers' catalogs and several textbooks (even going back to the ITT "Green Bible" of the 50s) as well as the ARRL Handbooks (several years worth).

You call that "stupid?"

I wouldn't. Any self-respecting worker who has been in electronics for years wouldn't.

Had you wanted to be "civil" about it, you could have simply acknowledged your mistake, stopped trying to build a Mt. Everest out of a teaspoon of sand, and gone on with life. You did not.
You have MANUFACTURED a dispute, insulted your challengers, and implied a number of things, all without any referencible data.

Your definition of "stupidity" seems to be that of ANYONE WHO DISAGREES WITH YOU or one who DOES NOT HONOR AND BOW-DOWN TO YOUR SUPPOSED MAJESTY AS AN AMATEUR.

Unfortunately, those "definitions" seem endemic to pro-coders, those who insist on keeping a morse code test for amateur radio into the far future. That viewpoint is entirely EMOTIONAL based on your own experiences, has no validity in the supposed

"necessity" of keeping that morse code test in USA amateur radio licensing.

"You did it so everyone else has to..."

That's a selfish, self-righteous viewpoint in my opinion.

It confuses the actual necessities of a government regulating agency trying to mitigate many, many users of the civil radio spectrum with some fraternal-organization in-house "rules" of just one radio service out of many, "rules" that were established decades ago.

You cannot support your "cause" with anything but throwing personal insults at your challengers. You have already LOST your arguments concerning the morse code test issue. You win NOTHING except in your imagination.

It is even worse, perhaps sociopathic in that over-the-top self-righteousness, to claim you are a "better human being" just for having taken a morse code test...as an AMATEUR. You seem to look down your royal nose at all who wish to remove the code test from amateur radio licensing. Especially so when you cannot establish your bona fides of "long-term experience" supposedly in radio beyond amateur activities.

>You're not worth my time.

Obviously not, "your majesty." :-)

Here's a suggestion: Drop the "outraged" act and start thinking about the SUBJECT, not your own emotionalism. One good way to make you feel better to yourself is to find a morsemanship-support group. Such a group can sit around and praise one another. Makes all in the group warm and fuzzy holding the same opinion. Its also a way to hold off the future and any changes in regulations, but only within your own fantasies.

An alternative is to just LEAVE rec.radio.amateur.policy. Few in here see you as the Final Arbiter of what is "good" and what is "bad" in amateurism.

Leave or stay. Your choice. Matters not to me. Government will continue - in a democratic-process fashion - to serve ALL citizens, not just one group of radio spectrum users. A group, I might add, that is a distinct MINORITY of all radio users.

Think on that. [few pro-coders do]

It's a "sort-of" reminder, Mark, but let's clear up something:
I don't personally "loathe" this "exmarine." That person isn't worth much in here, always insulting those who just disagree with his viewpoint. It's not possible to have any sort of dialogue with Major Dud. :-)

It's pretty much the same with all the self-righteous, ultra-conservative (about the code test) pro-coders. Sigh.

As to Klein, all he seems to want in here is to FIGHT. In that regard he is a clone of Robeson and first cousin to several others in here. He is too haughty to correspond with anyone who disagrees with him.

Perhaps someone once jammed an IC above his arm?
He has been going around "with a chip on his 'shoulder'" ever since... :-)

1. The FCC has NOT "reduced 'your' bands," nor is it somehow threatening to "sell them" to anyone. Had you bothered to look at this process of AUCTIONING certain COMMERCIAL bands and the Congressional laws establishing it, you would have seen that it does NOT apply to radio amateurs.

2. Since WARC-79 'you' have gotten MORE BANDS and that has increased up to a few years ago when 'you' got the five 60m channels.

3. There doesn't seem to be any "waning interest" in USA amateur radio considering the overall licensee numbers.
The newcomer licensees are - just managing - to keep the licensee numbers in numeric bouyancy, almost keeping pace with those letting their licenses lapse. See www.hamdata.
com FCC data page.

4. "Dying hobby" must be entirely subjective since there is no real sign that amateur radio equipment and supplies companies are closing down nor has the ARRL threatened to dissolve their $15M per annum profit publishing business.
Since 1990 three INDEPENDENT amateur radio publications have ceased, primarily due to lack of advertising revenue,
NOT for interest in the hobby.

>Ham radio was so much better back in the late 70's, when I first became >licensed. People were polite, and the radio had a mystique to it.

I find that highly subjective, primarily in comparison to the times of the mid-50s. Let's look at the "mystique" of the late 1970s insofar as radio communications are concerned:

1. Communications satellites were well-established for international video-audio relay with thousands of circuits for voice and data. More would come in the next three decades until the geosynchronous orbit positions were filled before the 1990s were over.

2. HF spectrum users, the majority being commercial-government prior to the 1970s, were LEAVING HF for more reliable 24/7 circuit throughput IN the beginning of the 1970s. The peak use of HF occurred during the mid-1950s to 1960.

3. Tens of thousands of radio communications licensees (with all their users and equipment) were ALREADY up and communicating from low-VHF on up. That would continue to grow in the next three decades until the FCC and NTIA had to expand the VHF-and-up spectrum for such radio services as PLMRS (Private Land Mobile Radio Services), maritime radio (for private boat owners and inland-waterway and harbor comms).

4. MILLIONS of Citizen Band radios existed, CB (on HF) was created in 1958, two decades before the late-1970s. Licensing of CB had been dropped and the off-shore radio makers had established themselves in the radio market, including CB.

5. "Radio" was KNOWN to the general public as a means to communicate and had been known for decades. "Known" in a sense beyond the obvious of TV and AM and FM broadcasting and international telecasts. The public did NOT "know" that morse code modes were used except perhaps for watching the last of the "Westerns" on TV and old WW2 movies.

6. In the mid-1950s the BIG communicators on HF were already in a process of change of mode. Teleprinter data was the overwhelming majority mode for written communications for commercial and government users of the ONLY long-haul comm circuits. Microwave radio relay for both short and long distances on land had already begun. Only the maritime world held to their morse code modes with, rarely, voice on AM.

7. In the late 1970s 'you' already had solid-state HF radios (transmitters barely reaching 100 W PEP) with the beginnings of synthesized frequencies. VFOs, now reliable and stable, were a standard feature for frequency control. In the mid-1950s frequency control of the then-standard tube type radios was essentially one-crystal/one-frequency type unless one could afford a very expensive (then) "Collins" (or equivalent) manufactured radio.

8. The Semiconductor Era had already begun in ALL of electronics and new techniques and methods were the order of the day in comparison to the limitations of tube architecture in the mid-1950s. In that regard, there IS a "mystique."

I would state that a vast cornucopia of things were suddenly opened by the many-plateau advances in electronics technology, sometimes happening at a rate of advancement that was near overwhelming.
Having been a part of the electronics industry for 53 years I not only saw it but was immersed in it, doing it while keeping up with it.

>With the >internet and the immediate gratification that everyone seems to expect these >days, Ham Radio is undesirable; having to hunt for contacts when you can >just IM someone? Having to work for a license? Not anymore, no one wants to >put any effort into anything when they have an easier alternative.

Unless there has been some "stealth" action of government to redefine FCC rules, amateur radio has ALWAYS been considered a non-commercial AVOCATION. It is a HOBBY without having to be stated as such in Parts 1 and 97 of Title 47 C.F.R. There is NO legal necessity to "WORK" for a hobby pursuit, is there?

Absolutely YES, I will opt for an "easier alternative" to ANYTHING! When I began in Big-Time HF radio communications, the "easier alternative" ALREADY existed in the products of Teletype Corporation. The teleprinter had already displaced manual morse code modes for the majority of messaging even before WW2 (in business and government and the military).

So, if 'we' all do this 'work' thing, who is going to give 'us' this permission to exist on the same planet as all you extras? Would 'we' be FIRED if 'we' didn't 'work?" [delusions of Donald Trump there?]

Ah..."not enough EFFORT being put forth" by us not-licensed-in-the-AMATEUR-radio-service? Right...some of us have been professionals in radio and electronics for decades, WITHOUT any morsemanship tests! Even though we've put our own time into keeping up with radio and electronics for all those decades (without renumeration for those efforts), that isn't good enough for you? Here, have a [rude Italian hand gesture]

The FCC was NEVER chartered as an academic institution and those valued [suitable for framing] licenses are NOT "grades earned" (after all that 'work'). The job of the FCC is just regulate, mitigate ALL civil radio in the USA. Mere 'tenure' as a radio amateur does NOT make someone better nor does all the snarling about "nobody wants to 'work' for their license" change anything. You want the US amateur radio regulations to FREEZE in those old days ways? Fine, send in your proposal to the FCC and tell them why it should remain in the freezer. They MUST, by law, examine ALL proposals submitted by citizens. [I wouldn't expect that they actually put forth an NPRM on keeping regs on ice, but they WILL look at it]

>Unfortunately, the good old days are gone, and ham radio is in the sunset of >its existence.

1. Take your sunglasses off or step out from behind the curtains. It is a BRIGHT day with sun HIGH in the sky for amateur radio...unless you are one of the olde-tymers who refuse to acknowledge change.

2. There exist new medications that can alleviate depression and, perhaps, a feeling of ennui. See your doctor about that.

3. "The good old days are gone?" THANK GOD! I was IN those 'good old days' and am damn glad that radio and electronics has improved, gotten easier, enabled us (except morsemen) to do more and better things! I look FORWARD to each and every improvement that makes things EASIER! I've already done lots of things with lots of personal labor and I sincerely APPRECIATE whatever labor-saving, work-saving things that are available now.

Hey, if you WORK real hard, study real hard, maybe you can come up with a TIME MACHINE! Yeah, right, it could take you back to those "good old days" that you seem to like so much.
Like back to a time when "ham" was a pejorative expressed by professional morsemen? :-)

1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Let's take back ham radio.

Mark, Just ignore them.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you
follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look
